columns in this newspaper, attempted slander, to a downright vow to kill us. They also apparently believed they would never see their words, spoken through an electronic device, in print.

These incidents were "triggered" by our accurate reporting of the murder of Lonnie Everett Atwater, 22, on Saturday night, June 4, allegedly by his girlfriend, Miss Shirley Ann White, 23.

The first call came at our home at 1:46 p. m. Thursday. The caller identified herself as Mrs. Atwater, and gave us "down the country" for our accounts of the Atwater slaying. She also threatened to boycott the newspaper, "along with several of my friends."

Mrs. Atwater then attacked our column, The Crime Beat, for reasons both she and the writer know. "What kind of person are you?" she asked. "Why did you have to print all about his (Atwater's) past record?"

We assured Mrs. Atwater that we had no personal grievance against Atwater and hardly knew him. We expressed our sympathy at the demise of the young man, but emphasized that it is our obligation and responsibility to print all the facts and truths, that we know to be true, in our newspaper.

The second call, also on Thursday, came at 9:55 p. m., as we were enjoying the final few minutes of "Peyton Place" on television.

The "messenger," this time was a man, who seemed so infuriated that we recognized his voice right away and told him, "We know who you are." He appeared so pent up with emotion and hate that his conversation of two minutes duration, contained the most vulgar and profane language that the writer has ever had the displeasure to hear.

The essence of his conversation was this: "Are you Charles Jones, the managing editor of that paper? We assured him that we were. Then he said, 'Why did you write all that stuff about my boy, Atwater? I'm going to kill you.'"

Profanity was interspersed throughout this short conversation, climaxed only by our "hanging up" the telephone. His name is now on file with the proper authorities for further investigation. We hereby put this person on notice that there is no place for fear in our position.

The final carrier of venom was a woman who called us at our office at 1:16 p. m. last Friday. This woman attempted to defame our character by bringing up circumstances of the past over which we had no control. This newsman has known the woman for a number of years and was surprised at her telephoning.

We say to her as Jesus Christ said to the accusers of the Woman at the Well: "He that is without sin, let him cast the first stone."

Any persons with criticisms or praises are hereby invited to use our office telephone, as our home facility is reserved for our close friends and personal acquaintances.

Rest assured also, that our by-line shall appear on murder stories and even baby christenings, if we chose to let it be so.

LBJ's Rights

METHODISTS ALSO COMPLAIN

A similar plaint was voiced by a Methodist leader, who said he knew of no invitations extended to those in his church most concerned with the rights issue.

Dr. Payton said that he believed the conference's troubles resulted from President Johnson's failure to realize "the amount of stimulation his proposal would make," when he summoned the conference in a speech at Howard University a year ago.

"Having taken over some of the rhetoric of the civil rights movement, the President got trapped in the substance and he found this was pretty hot stuff," Dr. Payton said.

Capitol Hill, where hearings, started on proposed new civil rights legislation, Monday, was relatively calm except for each enemy. Sen. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., D-N. C., called the whole matter absurd Sunday in a 10,000 word statement.

As chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on constitutional rights, Senator Sam J. Ervin promised full and complete hearings on the controversial bill, six other related Senate measures and amendments to existing legislation.

The senator said he has asked views and comments on the legislation from governors of all 50 states, law professors and the chief education officer in each state in which federal officials are trying to apply school integration guidelines.

He did praise President Johnson for submitting to Congress the proposed ban on discrimination in rental, lease or sale of housing instead of trying to put this into operation by existing order.

Some civil rights advocates have criticized the President for not integrating housing by the "stroke of a pen."

Ervin said the proposed ban on discrimination in housing "would deprive the American people of the right to sell, lease or rent their property to whom they choose."

It is absurd, he continued, to contend that real property is part of the interstate commerce and so subject to federal controls.

It is ridiculous to argue that human rights rank above property rights, he said.

"Property has no rights, only attributes," Ervin said. "The right to property is a human right, a civil right - a right expressly protected by the constitution."

"Conversely, failure to protect the human right to property is a typical characteristic of totalitarian states along with the denial of freedom of speech, press and religion."

Numerous states and cities now have fair housing laws, Ervin noted, "although none with coverages as broad as the one proposed here."

"Yet the largest slums and ghettos of which we hear so much are in states with fair-housing laws, and no appreciable change in housing patterns ever followed their enactment."

face with a soft drink crate.

Then Charles Lee, 21, of 14 McMakin St., joined the melee, and he hit Miss Ella Mae McLamb, 30, of 619 1/2 E. Hargett, with his hands and fists and Miss McLamb retaliated by stabbing young Lee in the back with an ice pick. Lee then hit Walter Lane, 63, of 208 Spence St., about the face with his hands and fists.

Shortly thereafter, all five resumed the fight outside the Latin Casino, and were so engaged when the patrolmen came upon the scene at Boundary and S. Haywood Streets.

Exhibiting bruises were Walter Lane, Mrs. Williams, Swade Archible, and Ella McLamb, all of whom were treated and released at Wake Memorial Hospital before being taken to Wake County Jail.

Lane, Mrs. Williams, Miss McLamb and Archible had stab wounds in the back, while Lane and Mrs. Williams were also treated for facial and eye wounds.

Miss Dorothy McLamb, the complainant, was not arrested.

ped for a day at a bridge over the Coldwater river, eight miles from the woods where Meredith was gunned down, then returned to Memphis for one of the biggest civil rights mass meetings ever held since the 1965 Selma-to-Montgomery walk.

Among those who addressed the assemblage of more than 1,000 persons in the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church were Dr. King, Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive director Whitney Young, executive secretary, National Urban League; Floyd McKissick, national director, Congress of Racial Equality and militant Stokely Carmichael, national chairman, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee.

Rev. Debnam said, "Brethren, you had made a fine choice in the selection of your Worshipful Master for the coming year. No man in our lodge or any other lodge has served a craft with more religious diligence than Brother Jones. Secretary for 27 years with only two absences and last year Junior Warden with regular attendance and consecrated devotion.

"Your recognition of his valuable services and your subsequent election assure me that I leave this lodge, which I love, in the hands of competent leadership and under the constant care and supervision of dedicated craftsmen."

Mr. Jones, in response, said, "I am overwhelmed and yet appreciative of the high honors you have bestowed upon me. I here and now pledge to you a tenure of service in which each meeting will be planned and in which you, every one of you, will be called upon to hold in this planning. We shall need your ideas in our meetings and I, as your Master, will need Your Prayers," he concluded.

Negroes Get

Progress program, Humphrey disclosed that employment of non-whites in white collar jobs by companies affiliated with the program increased 9,818 last year, out of 95,390 new white-collar jobs.

The year before, non-whites got 6,629 new white-collar jobs with 100 program - affiliated firms, out of 19,276 new white-collar jobs.

"This between 1963 and 1964, non-whites represented something over one in three of the increase in white collar employment. Between 1964 and 1965, they represented something over one in 10," he said.

While the total number of new white-collar jobs for Negroes was larger last year than the year before, the overall number of new white-collar jobs was much larger than before.

"In other words, the pie got larger last year, but non-whites didn't get as large a share as they did in the previous period -- despite the affirmative action program of these 100 leading companies," Humphrey added.
