

Winston Youths Enter Eight Study Weeks

WINSTON-SALEM - A group of eager young men, all juniors and seniors at local high schools, started eight weeks of special instruction at Winston-Salem State College last Monday. They are enrolled in the College's Upward Bound Program.

The Upward Bound Program at the college, a project sponsored jointly by the college and the federal government, is designed for 100 boys of low income families. Its purpose is to reach the unachieved, to challenge the unchallenged and to motivate the unmotivated who have ability but who under ordinary circumstances would not aspire to go to college. The program is one of a number of such projects now being operated as a part of the war on poverty.

The boys will spend eight weeks on the campus under the tutelage of 20 experienced teachers and 12 young college men who will serve as counselors.

Work will be done in areas of communication, computation, physical education, and personal development. The program will extend through the 1966-67 year during which time the boys will participate in counseling and cultural enrichment activities.

The staff spent the week of June 13 being briefed and planning for their work. Dr. Kenneth R. Williams, president of the college, addressed the opening session of the staff.

Staff members are from the college and other area colleges and secondary schools. Men who will serve as counselors are area residents who are attending some of the leading colleges and universities in the eastern and southeastern United States.

Consultants included Mrs. Wanda Gray, Mrs. Alice Hankla, and Harold K. Boyd of the Institute for Services to Education, Inc., R. T. Ellett, Community Relations Representative of R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company; Associate Superintendent Raymond L. Sarbough of the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Schools; James L. Walker, Director of Public Safety of Winston-Salem; Dr. H. Rembert Malloy, Director, College Health Services, Winston-Salem State College; Don Hayes, Assistant Director, North Carolina Advancement School; John Canup of the Forsyth County Welfare Department; Roger M. Jones, Director of Public Relations, Western Electric Company and Grover Teeter, Manager, North Carolina Employment Security Commission.

Dr. W. Archie Blount, vice-president of the college, is director of the Upward Bound Project.

Yes, We All Talk

BY MARCUS H. BOULWARE

SUBSTITUTE MOTION
QUESTION: My club seems to get into great difficulty with the substitute motion and/or amendments. What would you suggest to remedy this situation? -- Mrs. C. B.

ANSWER: Most clubs get into difficulty with amendments because they attempt to change the wording of an original motion that is vague and wordy. For example, suppose the following main motion is proposed: "I move that we adopt the good neighbor project on the basis of 85 per cent participation, that is, if 15 per cent won't participate, and that we raise the remainder of money necessary to carry out the project, if we don't get full participation."

How can this motion be amended? It is too confusing. Main motions should be stated briefly, concisely, and pointedly.

Here is how I would propose the foregoing motion:

"Mr. Chairman, I move that we adopt the good neighbor project on the basis of 85 per cent participation."

A substitute for an original main motion can be more confusing than the original main motion. Main motions should be short and clear.

WHO'S UN-AMERICAN?

CHICAGO - Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., has denounced a proposed investigation of the civil rights movement by the House Un-American Activities Committee because "the names of petitioners demanding an investigation of me and other civil rights organizations are collected by persons... who philosophies... are not in accord with brotherhood as an individual dignity." The Rev. Bill Beeny, a white St. Louis Baptist minister who called 106,341 such signatures, admitted that they were gathered with the help of the John Birch Society and similar groups.
