need to know who is criteria where curriculum and educational concepts are concerned. Who should deny another an opportunity to develop his talents in an area where he best fits, especially when North Carolina and the South are bidding for the higher dollar, through technology. The world of technology must have technically trained people to direct it. Doctorates are absolutely a must in the American educational world. However, when the technical educational world is turned over to the formally trained, to administer, there isn't much to be expected as the training and interest are not there. For a good haircut we need a barber, a bricklayer is desirable to lay bricks, a carpenter is needed to fashion a dwelling, etc. and above all, we must have one whose mind has been trained and hands co-ordinated to be technical at the directing, lest we continue with make shifts.

sored for Jehovah's Witnesses by the Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of Brooklyn, N. Y. Attendance of 50,000 or more persons is anticipated, Taylor stated.

"The convention's theme will be 'God's Sons of Liberty,'" Mr. Taylor said. "Program features will be outstanding Bible discourses and vivid portrayals of Bible accounts that are filled with meaning for persons living in these critical times."

According to Taylor, the Baltimore assembly is one of thirteen being held by Jehovah's Witnesses this summer in the United States and Canada.

Community Organizations. Mayor Richard J. Daley, who has vowed to end all slum conditions in Chicago by 1967, issued a statement outlining the city's progress in housing and other areas prior to the rally and march.

He reported that substantial progress is being made in all of the aspects of the city's intensified code enforcement program to rid itself of slum housing by the end of 1967.

From January 1, 1965 to July 1 of this year, a total of 9,226 buildings containing 102,847 dwelling units were brought into full or partial compliance with building and housing codes throughout the city because of direct code enforcement.

As a result of direct code enforcement private investment in rehabilitation and repair in Chicago totals $34 million in this period, according to the Mayor's report.

The scroll left on the City Hall door by Dr. King and his followers listed "41 basic goals aimed at making Chicago a racially Open City."

They included economical pressure on discriminatory firms, a racial head-count of employees in business and public agencies, a $2 an hour minimum wage ordinance, open occupancy statements by public officials, elimination of "absentee precinct captains," non-discriminatory lending practices and revocation of city contracts with firms that face full-scale fair employment policies.

In posting the demands, Dr. King was following in the footsteps of his namesake, Martin Luther, a German theologian, who nailed statements on the door of Castle church in Wittenberg, Germany in 1517, attacking abuses connected with the Roman Catholic Church granting of indulgences.

Dr. King, in his speech at the rally, was critical of the term "black power." He said that it bears overtones of "black supremacy" and could cause a major split among leaders in the civil rights movement.

Other civil rights leaders who spoke at the rally included James Floyd McKissick, executive director of CORE.

vities of education and social development.

The Executive Board of the Lott Cary Convention imported the aid of Attorney Angie Brooks, who is a graduate of Lott Cary Mission School, Brewerville, Liberia, and who was assisted in her further undergraduate and graduate studies at Shaw University, Howard University and the University of Wisconsin, to accept an appointment for African Affairs. Upon the acceptance of this appointment, Counsellor Brooks returned to Africa in January and immediately instituted a program of reorganization and structure of Lott Cary Mission.

Among the numerous innovations instituted by Miss Brooks are the following: 1. Established a sound and efficient financial system of bookkeeping of receipts and expenditures with all records audited by a Certified Public Accountant; 2. Reorganized the faculty and instructional staff with teachers who are professionally trained; 3. Development of a curriculum with emphasis upon home economics, business courses of typing and shorthand, courses in farming, poultry raising and animal husbandry and beauty culture; and 4. Required courses in religious education and liberal arts.

Within the last six months, Miss Brooks has changed the physical structure of the Lott Cary Mission School. A new dining hall has been erected and modernly equipped. A new Home Economics building has been built. The dormitories have been renovated, painted, refurbished with modern lights and running water, with indoor toilets and showers.

street four youths were sitting on the steps, police said.

Witnesses stated that Al-dridge, seeing the girls start talking with the youths, walking across the street and said something to them.

As he turned around and was back across the street, he was shot twice in the left hand and twice in the back.

On the basis of information given by an informant, police are seeking an area youth.

As a result of the shooting, police questioned several known gang members in the area, bringing them into the Grand Crossing station for questioning.

All were released, as positive identification could not be made.

Although there were no arrests, a local reporter saw a policeman strike a youth in the back as he hustled the teenager into a squadrol at 63rd St. and Ellis Ave.

Police blocked off 63rd St. as they rounded up suspected members of teenage gangs.

Bus drivers on 63rd St. spoke of a gang attack near 63rd St. and Ellis Ave. that had stirred up area youths for more than an hour.

between the old schoolmaster (Harran) and Rev. Hall continued through life and passed on to the old teacher's son (the writer) and Rev. Hall and his wife, the former Etta Cash, who he married in 1911.

The couple reared a family of six children and assisted them in getting an education despite the meager income opportunities for Negroes in the mountain community of about 2,000 people 30 to 40 years ago. Summer camps, boarding homes - now give way to motels and lodges - gave Negroes about three months regular employment, during which they had to "save for winter" to be supplemented by whatever part-time jobs obtainable. A few women had year-around domestic jobs with kindly whites.

The writer was twelve when he and his widowed dad spent the winters of January through July 1910; and December 1910 through March 1911 in the home of young Rev. Hall and his seventy-seven year old invalid mother Mrs. June Hall who owned a ten-acre home tract on the outskirts of Brevard. She eventually lived to be well over one hundred years.

"Aunt Jane," as she was affectionately called by colored and whites alike, was bedridden for more than twenty years, prior to her death in the late twenties, many of which she made paper flowers which women of both races purchased. Occasionally, she made trips to her favorite Bethel Baptist Church seated in a buggy and carried into church in a plain white oak split-bottom chair.

D. C. Hall spent the majority of his years assisting with the ministry of the Bethel Baptist Church which group split with the original Bethel church about 1912-13.

Brevard community, altitude about 2300 feet above sea level, has had several Negro citizens who have lived past the century mark. A few the writer can recall, in addition to Mrs. Jane Hall, included Mrs. Mary Jane Thomas Kamp, Mrs. Sarah Thomas Mackay (sisters) and Deacon Sharpe.

'BLACK POWER'

movement, and embarked on a drive for total racial equality through the acquisition of "black power."

Black power was adopted as the dominant philosophy of the movement and defined as "the effective control and self-determination by men of color in their own areas."

According to Lincoln O. Lynch, CORE associate national director, Negroes seek "total control of economic, political, educational, and social wealth of our community from top to bottom. And the exercise of this power at the local level is simply that which all other groups in American society have done to acquire their share in American life."

An originator of the "black power" chant was the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee's new leader, Stokely Carmichael, who has argued that a black man ought to hit back when a white man hits him.

SNCC-oriented marchers in the Meredith march gained national attention with their sign reading "Move On Over or We'll Move Over You."

Carmichael preaches a militant pride in being a Negro, and argues that the old goal of integration is irrelevant today.

He regards the Administration's 1966 Civil Rights Bill as "totally useless and totally unnecessary," accusing the President of "trying to take himself off the spot again by putting a bill before Congress that was not needed."

Taking a middle view on "black power," was James Meredith, author of the Meredith March, who said he was not concerned about violence resulting from the "black power" slogan.

Meredith said he was heartened to see that Negroes "have the right to think differently from other Negroes" by identifying with "black power."

Vigorously opposed to "black power" was Dr. King, who talked instead of "sharing" power with whites.

"For the Negro to stoop down and choose to imitate the lowest form of his oppressor is foolish," said Dr. King.

"I prefer not to use the phrase (black power)," he went on. "It has dangerous racial overtones."

"We cannot win a violent campaign in this country. If I weren't morally against violence, I would be against it practically."

Also attacking the "black power" concept, by indirection, was author Lillian Smith, who quit CORE's advisory committee, charging that "nihilists" and "old-fashioned haters" have taken over the organization.

Citing CORE's call for black power, Miss Smith, author of works on Negro equality, said "I strongly protest the dangerous and unwise position CORE has taken on the use of violence in effecting racial change."

stored. If it is not restored, this is going to weaken the entire liberal movement, and it is going to be bad for the Negroes and bad for the Jews and bad for America."

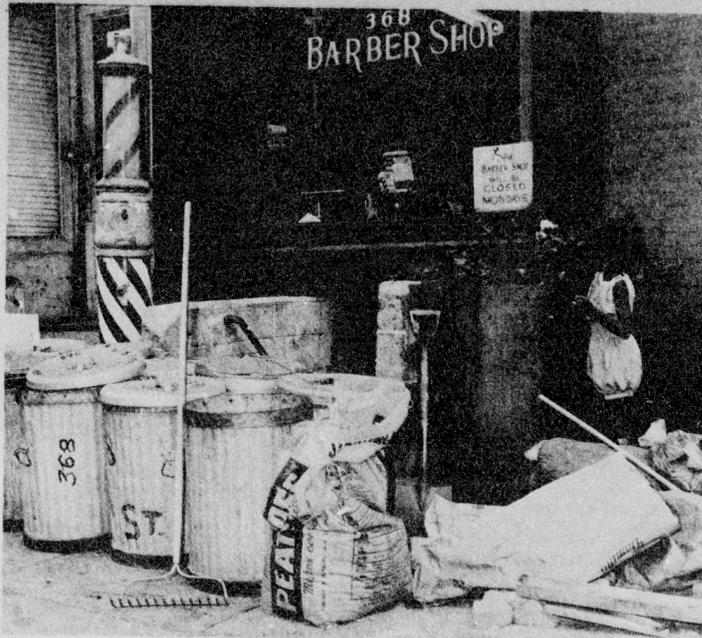

Joining with Dr. Slawson on the program, which was moderated by Dr. Eric Goldman, Professor of History at Princeton, were Dr. Kenneth B. Clark, Professor of Psychology at City College of New York; Dr. Alex Rosen, Dean of the Graduate School of Social Work of New York University, and Bayard Rustin, Executive Director of the A. Phillip Randolph Institute.

This liberal coalition -- representing, among others, church groups, labor, students, and minority groups -- had, according to Mr. Rustin, been responsible for the success of the 1963 "March on Washington," which he organized, and for passage of the Civil Rights Bill of 1964, and the Voting Rights Bill of 1965.

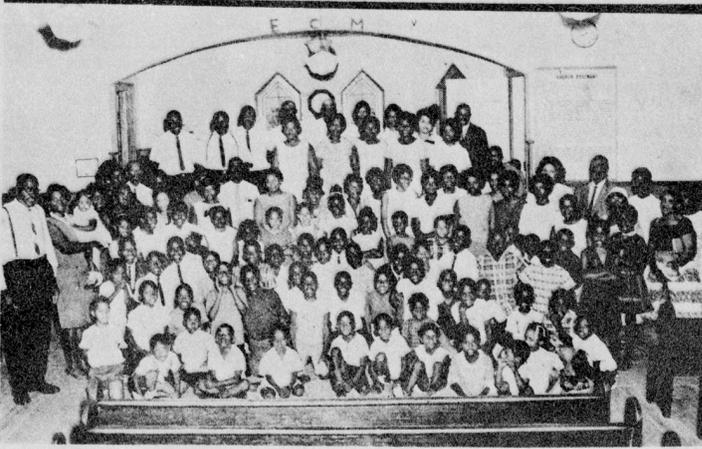

"As the war on poverty must be increased," he continued, "it can be increased only if those same forces, including Catholics, Jews, labor people, students, and others continue."

AID CUTOFF

BOSTON - Massachusetts has cut off $16 million in education funds to Boston after the city's school committee voted again to ban busing as a means of ending racial imbalance. A new state law requires cities and towns to eliminate racial imbalance in their public schools within a reasonable time or face a loss of state education aid.

"AND A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM" - New York: Denise Ingraham, 7 helps in a lower East side beautification project by planting flowers and plants in a flower box. A "watch pocket park," as opposed to a "rest pocket park," was the object of creation here. It is a smaller park which could be used by neighborhood youngsters and neighbors to play checkers and dominoes on warm evenings--a place to go to escape their hot apartments. (UPI PHOTO).

THE NEW BETHEL BAPTIST CHURCH OF ROLESVILLE, pastored by the Rev. W. A. Morgan, of Raleigh, had its annual vacation Bible School and Training Institute for the adults on July 4-8. The total enrollment was 120 persons. Refreshments were served daily for the children and adults. The Rev. C. C. Craig, director of the Department of Christian Education of the General Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, Inc., directed the Vacation Bible School and taught the adult Study course. The book used for the Study course was "The Church Organized and Functioning." The picture (above) is of the persons in attendance.

WEEK'S QUOTE

BUCK HILLS FALLS, Pa.-- "When religion addresses itself to the real issues of society, it is only doing its duty. Amos" (Old Testament prophet) plea for just weight and measurements was undoubtedly reinforced by the merchant's comments of his day, just as a strong declaration of the National Council of Churches on civil rights is offensive to the white supremacist." -- Bishop James K. Mathews, vice-president and Director of Christian Unity chairman, National Council of Churches, at annual meeting of U. S. members, World Council of Churches.

ASSIGNMENT

IMPERIAL BEACH, Calif. -- The first Negro priest to be assigned to head a white congregation in the Episcopal diocese of Los Angeles is the Rev. Atwell Stewart, 48, who has been named vicar of St. Mary's by the Sea Episcopal church. The former curate of Grace Episcopal, Los Angeles, takes over a 306-member congregation, 90

HIGH PRICE

ST. LOUIS -- "The nation has paid a high price because of bias and discrimination in employment policies," declared Dr. Luther Holcolm, vice-chairman, U. S. Equal Opportunity commission, during an address before the Consultation of Equal Employment Opportunity sponsored by the National Council of Churches recently. The meeting, which discussed ways of implementing and enforcing Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, including among the 100 representatives to top business and manufacturing firms, labor unions, government agencies, N.A.A.M. and other groups, William P. Grayson, vice president, Johnson Publishing Company, Chicago.

HOUSING PLEDGES

AKRON, Ohio -- Support for a campaign against racial discrimination in housing has been voted by the Presbytery of Cleveland, which represents 72 United Presbyterian churches in northern Ohio. The supper cent of which consists of Navy personnel.

BIAS SPLITS WORLD

NEW YORK -- "Color bias, in the guise of moral, cultural and intellectual superiority, is splitting the world-putting the two great power blocs (Communist and the West) against the emerging people," was one of the conclusions reached by delegates to the U. S. Conference on Church, Society and International Affairs, which convened recently in the Church Center for the United Nations. Striking specifically at the "myths of the Western world (which) are biased against colored peoples," was UN Ambassador Gershon B. O. Collier of Sierra Leone.

DE FACTO

HARTFORD, Conn. - De facto segregation of Northern school districts proved to be an explosive issue in several cities. A plan to bus Negro students in Hartford, Conn. to suburban schools has drawn fire from suburbanites. In Mt. Vernon, N. Y., parents awaited a state ruling on a planned "children's academy" which white and Negro pupils would attend for a couple of hours a day and then return to their segregated schools. In Hartsdale, N. Y., voters repudiated a merger of the community's school district with adjacent Woodlands school district. Hartsdale's schools have one Negro, while 36 per cent of Woodlands' 2,750 pupils are Negroes.
