AGENARIAN, VISITS

ROCKY MOUNT -- The congregation of the Mt. Pisgah United Presbyterian Church USA here, was glad to have a visit from its oldest member, who divides her retirement between Dee Cee and Wilson, Mrs. Elizabeth Orr Miller, a native of York County, S. C., will be ninety years of age on October 5th and is a lovely, sweet elder lady "who finds joy with all of God's children" and is thankful that she can still move around with reasonable health while she lives awhile with her son, John M. (Bing) Miller, Jr., a school principal, who lives at 1306 Fikewood Dr., Wilson, and her daughter, Mrs. Thelma Miller Odum, 5215 Addison Rd., North East, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Miller, who worked for many years in Presbyterian schools and churches over eastern Palmetto State, would appreciate hearing from her former students, friends and associates at either of the addresses listed (and she did, not ask for this plug). Remember her on her 90th birthday even if you do not know her.

During the last years of life for her husband, the kindly Rev. John Max Miller, Sr., the couple resided in this city with Mrs. Miller's sister, Mrs. Dor-

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Jones and Miss Hopson motored to Siler City, Thursday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cassiday. OUR KNOWN SICK

We are happy to report that our sick are much improved. Mrs. Emily Jones, of North Academy Street, is up and out again. Mr. Sidney Jones, of Kildara Road, is also out again.

The Daughters of Fidelity Tents will celebrate their 80th Anniversary Sunday, September 4th at St. John AME Church, Rhamkatte, at 2:30 in the afternoon. Sister Marie Gibbs will be mistress of ceremonies. Rev. E. E. Worthy is the guest speaker. A THOUGHT: "There is more power in the open hand than in the clenched fist. You can't out give God. You cannot get without giving."

MRS. 'LIZZIE' MILLER, NON- othy Orr Sellers, a public health nurse in Rocky Mount, until her retirement several years ago. Mrs. Sellers, in declining health, resides in a nursing home in Wilson, near her nephew, John Miller, Jr.

Mrs. Miller, despite her advanced age, has left a sizable contribution to assist in placing certain pulpit lights. Her late husband was often referred to as the kindly retired minister who never interfered with the work of the church and minister while living here; but was always ready to help whenever called upon to do so. He, too, was admired by all, irrespective of denomination.

Funeral rites were said from Mt. Zion First Baptist Church here Monday for Mrs. Zana D. Alston, widow of the late James Alston, who died as the result of being hit by an auto Thursday night while returning from visiting a sick friend. Mrs. Alston, at 70, was still a very devout and dedicated worker in her church and clubs. Rev. George W. Dudley conducted the rites and burial followed in Unity Cemetery.

Survivors include an adopted daughter, Betty Alston; two sisters, Mrs. Jamie Hill and Mrs. Eliza DeShazor; a brother, Frank Graham and four grandchildren.

Mrs. Mattie S. Bowen, a re-tired school teacher, who had been critically ill for several months, was funeralized last week following her death at home last Tuesday night. Theodore E. Bowen, her husband; and Mrs. Viola M. Taylor, a sister, survive.

High School Drop-Out Slated To Receive Degree At Bennett

GREENSBORO -- A high school drop-out, whose childhood ambition to attend college some day never diminished despite obstacles, is scheduled to complete requirements for graduation from Bennett College in three and one-half years.

Mrs. Jessie Mae Cardwell, of 608 High Street, mother of four, the youngest of whom was born the year before she enrolled in college, will complete her work at the end of the first semester of the 1966-67 acagemic year. A major in elementary education with a minor in social science, she has been consistently on the honor roll and also has been active in a number of campus organizations.

The wife of Leo M. Caldwell a city fireman attached to Station No. 4 on Gorrell Street, Mrs. Cardwell credits him with providing much of the motivation which enabled her to accomplish what she has.

"Leo has been my backbone," she confides. "He has been the 'Mommy' since I have been in college. In fact, my baby child used to call him 'Mommy,' He was my built-in baby-sitter on his days off. Without his patience and understanding, I never could have made it."

Fireman Cardwell not only was willing to sacrifice during the past three and one-half years, but he hopes that his wife will eventually earn her master's degree -- probably from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, because of its proximity -- and maybe, even to continue to the doctorate. A native of Greensboro, Mrs. Cardwell was the second eldest child in a family of nine--5 boys and 4 girls -- and will be the first girl in her family to finish college. One brother, a graduate of A&T College is now an Army captain, two others are in college and one will enter college visited Mrs. Howell Sunday evening, also Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Best.

A WEEKLY THOUGHT "All that the other giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out". Saint John, until nine years later, graduating No. 1 in her class from Laughlin High School, Summerfield, N. C. She is the mother of four--Cynthia, 11; Leo, Jr., 10; Michael, 9; and Sharon, 4.

"Among my greatest obstacles in college, " she said "were late afternoon and Saturday classes. This will be the first year that I have not had Saturday classes. I took a nap after dinner each day and did my best studying around 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning ginia, after I had rested and it was quiet and peaceful."

Mrs. Cardwell is a member of the International Relations Club, Student National Educa- after six years in California. tional Association, Non-Resident Club, Student National Education Association, Alpha Kappa Mu, national honor society, and the Senior Honor Society. She likes music and would have loved to be a member of the college choir but could not spare EIGH time for the almost daily rehearsals.

She did find time, however, for campus employment to help cut down expenses. This summer she worked in the Humanities School as an assistant to Dr. Hyman Kuritz, professor of Social science, and conducted classes during his occasional absences.

Not only did her husband encourage her but she received much encouragement from former teachers, principals and others in the community, among them Mrs. David D. Jones, wife of Bennett's late president. As a result of her example, a number of other pothers who dropped out of school have been inspired to return. "If one is to succeed in such an undertaking," she said, "she must have the full cooperation of the other members of the family. She is also going to have to put forth an extra effort to adjust to campus life. I did not find that being older than many of my classmates made any difference, in fact, some of them probably tried harder in order to keep pace with me."

If she does not go immediately into graduate school in February, Mrs. Cardwell will most likely accept employment in the local school system. "I like children," she confided, "but believe that I would do better with sixth graders than with first graders. Ifeel that I would do my best, however, teaching
