The charge of Mr. Bridges having whiskey for the purpose of sale without license was very expensive, $125.00 pint. He was ordered to pay $250.00 and serve 60 days in jail, suspended upon condition he not be near or at the club for two years.

Judge Brooks told Bridges that the club was only a public nuisance, and to see people down there in the streets and said he was going to talk with the district solicitor and have such places closed.

(Continued from page 1) JUDAISM, addressed to the one million members of 670 Reform temples in North America declared, "it would be a disaster of the first magnitude if the civil rights movement is splintered and weakened by black nationalism. Racism is an unmitigated evil and it is equally foul as a weapon for civil rights. Black supremacy is no lovlier than white supremacy."

The statement, prepared by A'bert Vorspan, UAHC, Director of Social Action, felt that If the "momentary leaders" of black nationalism destroy the work of leaders like the Rev. Martin Luther King and NAACP's Roy Wilkins it could lead to "distrust of government, of its laws and of whitemen and then all the immense promise of a new and free America will suffer irreparable harm."

In an additional comment Mr. Vorspan said "that the emotional turmoil evoked by the black power controversy has already infected public opinion, including some liberal Jewish opinion, and weakened needed public support for civilian review boards, the new federal civil rights bill, and financial contributions to civil rights agen-

He said this is a "heavy price to pay for a fruitless, divisive, and unnecessary tempest about a phrase (black power) no two people define in the same way."

Mr. Vorspan urged the extension of the liberal-labor-religious coalition of Negroes and whites devoted to a re-making of America as a just and integrated society.

The AMERICAN JUDAISM editorial said "let no man ignore the realities, both dangerous and helpful, but let no one use these realities, many of them harsh, as an un-Jewish and ignoble pretext for washing his hands of the greatest unfinished businessin American life."

The editorial added: "Let us stand up against all forms of racism, from whatever source. We are not in the fight for human rights because we wish Negroes to like us, or because they have invited us either in or out, but because it is our task as Americans, our religious imperatives as Jews, and our duty as human beings. We shall persist in that task, however rocky the road or shrill the voices of counsel from racists of all hues."

> ership, instead of limiting himself to categorical leadership. In fact, in order to fit into the new society, the Negro should and must be qualified to serve in all capacities. "The Negro has the same intelligence of any other race and it's up to him to develop this intelligence, then use it. We must be willing to accept responsibility, learn to stick when the strongest difficulties are to be faced. We also must realize that to make this a better world to live in, we must learn to take an active part." Mrs. Margaret Ruffin , cook, 224 Rand Road, Garner: "We should not only stop at categorical leadership, but should strive to be capable of any part of leadership, for without preparing ourselves for leadership, we will not be able to lead anything.

So I advise all high school stu- RUFFIN dents to take part in leadership in school. This is a changing society and our leadership and intelligence will be used in the near future, more than ever. Today is an age of automation," Bishop Maude Pope, pastor, Mt. Sinai Holy Church, Raleigh: "We should be a part of the entire world leadership. We should train ourselves and get ready for betterthings in life. One thing is to fellowship together and love one another also, Leadership also means to do good for evil and in order to be a leader, we must not leave God out of our lives, because God can do anything but fail.

BY SALLY SHAW

DEAR SALLY: I'm a 40year-old bachelor, and have agreed to drive my unmarried sister of 31 and two of her women friends on a vacation trip next month. There's one little ticklish problem that's bothering me a little. Since I'll be the only man in the group, more than likely in every place we eat the waiters and waitresses will be handing me the checks. Believe me, I'm not a stingy guy, but the truth is I just cannot afford to treat these three women to all their meals. And also, there's the matter of fuel for my car. Any advice? CHAUFFEUR.

DEAR CHAUFFEUR: This should be handled in a businesslike way, and you can best do this through your sister. Tell her that the easiest way to keep accounts straight is by requesting four separate checks at every meal, and also that you will keep a careful record of all your car expenses which can be split four ways at the end of the trip. In this way, all three of your guests will begin the trip with a thorough understanding of the financial arrangements and there will be no confusion later.

DEAR SALLY: Our son is soon to be married in a large, formal church wedding. We'd like very much to have all our relatives and good friends there, but are wondering how to go about inviting them. Would it be all right for us to mail out engraved invitations similar to the ones sent out by the bride's parents? A. C. G.

DEAR A. C. G: No. A wedding is strictly the bride's "party," and her parents, since they are paying all the expenses, are regarded as the "host and hostess," and of course as such, they issue all the invitations. You, as the parents of the groom. will be just "guests" at the wedding, and cannot issue invitations on your own. All you can do is suggest the names of those you'd like to attend to your son, and he can pass them on to his fiancee for inclusion in her list.

DEAR SALLY: I'm a girl of 18, and have a boy friend who is very fine and sweet. My parents have always liked him, too ... until just recently when they found out that he has the habit of drinking too much now and then. Now they don't want me to go with him. When I told him this, he said okay, he would cut out the drinking from now on, because he doesn't want to lose me. But this evening my father arrived home from work and told us that as he was passing one of our local taverns he saw my boy friend come reeling out with a couple of other fellows and they were all three very much "under the influence." So... what do I do now? IN A QUANDARY.

DEAR IN A QUANDARY: If you really think enough of this fellow, you can give him one more chance to make good (although personally, I think he sounds much too weak-willed). Tell him once and for all that he must take his choice now -the bottle or you. Then, if he falls off the wagon again -- good riddance!

DEAR SALLY: I'm a boy of 12 with a problem. I have nice parents who have always taught me to be honest and never tell a lie. But sometimes when I answer the phone, they tell me to say they are't at home. How

DEAR SALLY about this? Aren't they going
