YOU ARE THE DETECTIVE

You gaze down thoughtfully at the body of City Councilman Adam Tillar, still seated on the swivel chair, but slumped over, head down on the desk in his home study. Ycur eyes take in the immaculate, white, slender fingers spread out on the glass-covered surface of the desk, and contrasting sharply with the color of the orange peels piled neatly on the desk next to the councilman's right hand. From your position in back of the man, you bend over to inspect the bullet wound in his right temple. Then you straighten up and walk over to your left to the huge glass sliding doors leading outside to the terrace. At one of these doors, which is open, stands the victim's law partner, Edward Bailey, nervously puffing on a cigarette.

"It's incredible!" exclaims Bailey, "Adam was such a vigorous, outgoing sort of man ... so full of life and the joy of living! And now he's dead ... I just can't ... "

"Suppose you tell me just how this happened," you break in.

"Well, I was calling on Adam this evening .. he was still very active in law practice, you know, in addition to his duties on city council..and I had some business matters to go over with him. We had a real good talk in here, ironed out quite a few things, and then I got up from my chair to stroll about the room while Adam proceeded on one of his favorite snacks, the eating of an orange. He peeled the orange and had just finished eating it when successly more accessed on a big look of fear as he looked behind me at the glass doors here , then a shot rang out behind me, and Adam fell forward on his desk., dead! I wheeled around, but already the killer had disappeared, and when I rushed out onto the terrace there was no sight of him."

"Do you know of anyone at all who might be a likely suspect?" you ask.

"No..no one specifically. Adam was well liked by all our associates, but of course, as you know, he was at one time in the district attorney's office and there are any number of criminals whom he sent to prison during that time who might still be harboring enough resentment towards him to have done this."

"I'm surprised," you then say, "that an attorney of your experience and reputation could have made the mistakes you have made with your story."

Bailey throws a startled look at you. "Why...what do you mean?" he sputters.

What DO you mean?

size, about 1 hour.

SOLUTION In the first place, the bullet hole was in the victim's RIGTH temple, although according to Bailey's story, the shot had come from the doors leading out to the terrace which were to the victim's LEFT. In the second place, you had noticed the victim's "immaculate, white fingers." Yet, if he had been peeling and eating oranges, as Bailey stated, his fingers would surely have been stained with orange juice and pulp.

Don't Worry About AFL Bulffalo On Way

Pity those Buffalo Bills, the defending American Football League champs, the guys who got their brains knocked out the first two times around this season.

Well, don't hold your breath. The Bills don't lead the league in either offense or defense, but they proved last Sunday that two setbacks do not make a season . . . and that pre-game catcalls can go down the drain mighty quick. The Bills clocked the Miami Dolphins 58-24, grabbing a 48-10 lead early in the second ... yes, second quarter, and reminded Buffalo fans that the Bills still have designs on a third consecutive AFL crown. The 58-point performance came within a single point of tying the AFL record for most points scored in a game, 59 by Kansas City against Denver in 1963, and tied the second best performance, 58 points by San Diego versus Denver during the same 1963 season. Buffalo rookie coach Joe Collier put it this way: "This game proved that our players have confidence in themselves. A lot of folks may have questioned their determination. But, today they went out and played the kind of a game they generally played the past two years.'

And, Joe was honest, too: "We got a lot of breaks . . . most of them made by our aggressiveness. No pro team scores the number of points we scored without the ball bouncing in our favor." On Jack Kemp, the 1965 MVP who had troubles in the season's first two games, but

But, the best line probably came from all-League defender Butch Byrd, one of the leaders of a Buffalo defense that has been called the AFL's best over the past two sea-sons. Byrd romped back a Rick Norton pass 60 yards for a tally and, four plays later, picked off a Dolphin punt and raced 72 yards for another score.

Was he happy? "I did so many things wrong, it's unbelievable," offered Byrd.

If Butch is unhappy, Joe Collier isn't. Buffalo is back in the Eastern Division chase, and can prove it in spades this weekend when the Bills tangle with a rebounding Houston entry in Buffalo.

Cooking Cool

During heat wave time - think cool, cook cool, eat cool. Start supper with chilled consomme, topped with slices of lemon. Follow with a meal in a sandwich, using the recipe below for a Crusty Sandwich Loaf. The bread is real homemade yeast bread - but don't let that scare you. It's made with Bisquick and baked in just 15 minutes. (In the cool of the morning, of course.) Once the bread cools, wrap it in foil and let it sit till sandwich stacking time. Then make lots of iced tea, sprigs of mint afloat. For dessert - cold sliced peaches and cream. Serve your refreshing meal within the shade of a breezy patio. And now you're cooking! But cool.

There's nothing quite so awk-

Let children have a little dinner party of their own but don't make it a miniature of the adult's repast since most youngsters are unfriendly to exotic dishes. I always serve several types of wine to my guests, and find that serving children Pepsi-Cola in a glass with a striped swizzle stick and a wedge of lemon on the rim gives youngsters the feeling their beverage
