Women IN THE KNOW

By Jean Kinkaid, Women's Consultant, The Travelers Insurance Companies

Children's Dental Health
Women in the know recognize how important it is to start children early on programs of dental health. Neglect can cause facial malformation, speech defects, and infections, and future dental health depends largely on early dental care. Despite major advances in dentistry there are more serious dental problems to day than ever before, simply because we do not take advantage of the wonders of dental science.

Another reason doctors on the medical staff at The Travelers recommend early dental care is to establish the dentist in a child's mind as a family friend, not as an inflicter of pain. If your dentist doesn't take care of young children, he will refer you to a "pedodontist," a relatively new breed of dentist specializing in dentistry for youngsters.

Getting acquainted during these early visits will involve a look at all the gadgets, a whirl around in the chair, gentle cleanings and a squirt of sweet-tasting mouth wash. Actual dental work will probably begin when the youngster's permanent teeth arrive.

The week of February 6th has been designated National Children's Dental Health Week to remind parents of the far-reaching benefits of early dental care. Let this be a reminder to make a dental appointment for your child, and then to make sure he follows the dentist's advice regarding brushing after meals and sensible candy-eating habits.

Important, too, is the fact that healthy teeth and gums promote general good health. National Children's Dental Health Week can also be a reminder to review your health insurance program with your insurance agent. A call to him now could prove beneficial later.

With Harold Cooley, North Carolina has a powerful voice in Washington.

The President of the United States is the busiest man in the world. The door of his office is opened to only a few men. Harold Cooley is one of them. For the past three decades, America's chief executives have sought his advice, and for 32 years he has participated in great decisions.

He was a strong supporter of the Tobacco Program, the Cotton Program, and President Roosevelt's Social Security Act. He helped develop the Marshall Plan under President Truman. He was the author of the Food for Freedom bill, enacted under President Eisenhower and expanded under President Kennedy. He was one of the leaders who guided President Johnson's Tax Cut through the House of Representatives. And as Chairman of the Agriculture Committee, Harold Cooley has been protecting the interests of the American farmer and consumer for 15 years.

In his post as committee chairman, and as the seventh-ranking member of the House in seniority, Harold Cooley acts on more major legislation than any other member of Congress. The people of North Carolina's 4th District have made a wise investment in the experience they've given their congressman. Today, they have a mighty powerful voice in their national government. It just makes good sense to keep him there.

Re-elect Harold Cooley to Congress.
