Did You Miss Your VA Check?

Most veterans attending school under the GI Bill have received their first check, but if you're one who did not and fall to receive your check due this week, it's possible you failed to do your home-work, W. R. Phillips, Manager of the North Carolina Veterans Administration Rgional Office told veteran students today.

Phillips urged those students who failed to receive checks due this week to:

1. Make sure that the notice of enrollment, which must be filled out and mailed by the school, has been sent to the VA by the school.

2. Make sure the certificate of attendance, which the veterans must fill out and send to the VA, has been mailed.

3. If there is any question about payment, contact the VA Office, by phoning 723-2911.

Phillips pointed out that it was not necessary for the veteran student attending college to send in his certificate of attendance for the first month since VA accepted the college's notice of enrollment as basis for paying the first check. However, Phillips emphasized, all subsequent checks will be withheld until the student's own certificate of attendance is receiv-

You are sitting in the office of your friend, Police Lieutenant Sam Wilson, and he is relating to you some of the details of a jewel theft that occurred the preceding evening.

"Late last night," he begins, "we received a phone call from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Gardner. Seems they had been entertaining three other couples in their home during the evening, and immediately after the departure of their guests Mrs. Gardner discovered that one of her most valuable pieces of jewelry was missing -- a diamond studded necklace. She knows for a fact that it disappeared sometime during the evening, because all her guests had been commenting on it and admiring it when she showed it to them soon after their arrival. She wasn't wearing it last night, however."

Lieutenant Wilson pauses to light a cigarette, then resumes: "Here's some of the miscellaneous information I've managed to gather on these three couples, and it reads like a jigsaw puzzle. The spouse of the thief lost money in the bridge game that four of the people played there last night. Mr. Charles Carter, one of the guest present, hasn't been able to drive his car for the past two weeks due to arthritis in his hands. Mrs. Browning, one of the women guests, and one of the other women at the party spent the entire evening playing gin rummy with each other. Mr. Browning accidentally spilled some of his drink on the dress of one of the women guests, Mrs. Frank Andrews, when he was introduced to her. Mr. Carter gave his wife half the money he had won at bridge to compensate her for her losses. Mr. Peter Browning played eighteen holes of golf yesterday afternoon, and one of the members of his foursome was the thief."

Lieutenant Wilson crushes the stub of his cigarette in the ashtray on his desk, flashes a grin at you, and asks, "Well, can you unravel this hodgepodge of information and put the finger on the guest who lifted Mrs. Gardner's jewelry?"

SOLUTION

Mrs. Peter Browning is the thief. Charles Carter won money at bridge; therefore, we know that his wife was not the thief. Since Mrs. Carter played bridge, the other woman guest who played gin rummy must have been Mrs. Frank Andrews. Since Mrs. Browning and Mrs. Andrews did not play bridge, neither of their husbands could have been the thief. If Mr. Carter were troubled with arthritis in his hands, he could not have played golf earlier that day with Mr. Browning, and could not have been the thief. This eliminates all but Mrs. Browning and Mrs. Andrews. Since Mr. Browning had not met Mrs. Andrews prior to last evening, he could not have played golf with her earlier in the day -- which eliminates Mrs. Andrews. Therefore, the thief must have been Mrs. Browning.
