Eastern Team, Scouts Enjoy Annual Shrine Bowl Classic

WINSTON-SALEM - Before the smallest crowd and in perhaps the coldest weather in the history of the Shrine Bowl Classic the East team, coached by W. A. Hunter and Ike Boone took the number of the West team, coached by Jack Martin and Charlie England, by the score of 12-0 and scouts from the major colleges had a good time roasting each other as to what some of these players would be doing to their teams in the next two or three years.

The best consolation the Shriners of the Desert of North Carolina, sponsors of the game, got was the fact that they had again given the seniors of the high schools of the state to show their wares before the scouts of both the pro football organizations and the major colleges of the nation. The Shriners were also able to present the boys clubs of Goldsboro and Wilmington money, derived from the game, which will be used in the programs of building better boys out of the less fortunate ones.

Scouts came from Wake Forest, Michigan State, Catawba, University of Wisconsin, Winston-Salem State, N. C. A & T, Elizabeth City, Maryland State, Johnson C. Smith, Morgan and Fayetteville.

Such words as scholarship, grant-in-aid and opportunities were tossed around freely in the post-game conversation. Players on both teams were approached but none were talking to the press.

Hardnose football won the game for the East, according to coaches Walter Hunter of Elizabeth City Moore and Herman (Ike) Boone of Williamston Hayes.

"Our boys did a good job of playing their hearts out and hustling," Hunter said. "The cold weather hampered our game plan. We couldn't throw as much as we wanted to."

Tom Hamilton contributed 14 for the Tigers.

Sterling McLean was the high man for Shawtown with 21 points. Merrick-Moore will make a return trip to Lillington Tuesday night before rolling out the welcome mat for Greensboro's Dudley Panthers next Friday.

Mary Potter Takes Virgilina's Sting, 35-29

OXFORD - Toler High of Virgilina came into Oxford with blood in their eyes Friday night and after James Moseley's aggregation had built up a 35-29 lead in the first half Bob Royster got hot and led the Toler boys to a 6-point lead in the third quarter, only to see the Rams come back in the final quarter and win the game by the score of 76-65.

Had Royster gotten a little more it would have been a difference. He sank 25 points to pull even with the Rams' Winston, who also poured in 25 and it was Winston's five quick baskets that upset the Tolerites in the last quarter that told the story. Henderson helped Royster with 12 points, while Reid

Three other returnees and nine freshmen turn outs will give the team added height and depth.

SHRINE BOWL HIGHLIGHTS

There were mixed emotions among the Shriners at the 10th annual Shrine Youth Bowl classic, played in Bowman-Gray Stadium, Saturday.

Apprehensions began to mount when very few people turned out to see the two-hour parade. The old saying, "I love a parade" was questioned when the parade reached the hub of Negro activity, 3rd and Church Streets, where the crowd was very small and the enthusiasm mild.

The bands blazed forth, the drum majors pranced and the majorettes twirled and gyrated, but the crowd was cold. The parade moved thru 3rd Street and made its way toward Winston-Salem State College and the crowd grew thinner. By the time it reached the gate of the college there were very few people viewing. The Winston Salem band could be heard on campus, but had no part in the parade.

The drab activity grew worse when James Johnson, the popular illustrious Potentate of Raleigh Kabala Temple, had to take his car out of the parade for fear it would give out of gas.

The famous drill team from Morrison Training School had bus trouble and did not arrive until game time. The marching club from Fayetteville's Cape Fear Court got some applause as it abated, platooned and went thru the latest military exhibitions.

There were those who attributed the small turnout to the cold weather. This was attested to by the queen, who was shivering from cold. She said the cold penetrated her body, while riding in the parade. She was still shivering when she went out to be crowned by W. E. Honeyblue, who was in charge of the "Queens Contest." Mrs. Jack Penn, wife of the marshal, accompanied the queen and her court, and was quite ready to take the entire entourage back to the press box as soon as the crowning ceremonies were over.

The Sportsmen, under the leadership of J. D. (Big Joe) Williams did a marvelous job, beginning with the kick-off dinner at the cafeteria of Winston-Salem State College, Friday night. They had before and after dinner speakers, who welcomed the players, the coaches, the Shriners, the scouts and the press.
