turn toward republicanism. But the astute Old South would never admit its anti-Negro purposes, so it goes all out for conservatism. The attempt to rally the conservatives is no more than an attempt to return to power those who would perpetuate the status quo with the Negro as second-class citizen. The Anti-Negro South's plea and concern for political conservatism is hinged about the old, old effort to keep the Negro down, although the South's pride forbids its open fight on the defenseless Negro. Nevertheless, it is not ashamed to conceal its anti-Negroism under the cloak of conservatism. The South is attempting to rally the conservative elements of the South and nation to defeat the Negro's further efforts at desegregation and integration. The Old South is mustering up a strong support even of those who do not suspect its ultimate design. Ultra-conservatism is anti-Negroism!

Just as the Southern brand of conservatism is directed against the Negro's advance, so is the States Rights appeal.

The South has had considerable success in winning advocates of States Rights throughout the nation and they are winning more advocates every day. But States Rights in the face of rabid race prejudice can be a hellish thing, as events of the past have proved so conclusively! The great opposition to Federal interference in state affairs stems from the overmastering passion to wrest from the Federal Government any and all powers of interference with the South's prerogatives in handling its interracial affairs. Such prerogatives for the South are dangerous, for the South and its Negro citizens and for national security. One of the ugliest scars on the fair face of our beloved nation has been made by the South's anti-Negro elements, the Pharaohs who are resolved not to let the Negro go! Watch the States Rights Movement and the drive for political conservatism: both are indirect drives against the hapless Negroes! By implication, the election was anti-Negro.

nation's upper and middle classes already have received a "much more gigantic subsidy" over the years in the form of housing programs and public financing of "the roads that were crucial for the flight to suburbia."

Randolph referred to the car in Viet Nam in replying to the argument that the "freedom budget" proposes "profligate" outlays in view of the costs of the fighting. The question, he said, is one of priorities and involves "who will pay for the war."

"Gentlemen, I say no matter what you think of the war, whether you favor or oppose the administration's policies, if the war goes on, and if this country makes the black and white poor pay for it, this will have the most disastrous consequences on our democratic way of life," he said.

the Executive Board did not have the power to depose the father due to the fact that under the constitution of the body such powers had never been delegated to the Board. He called the ouster illegal, because Bishop Jones had not been given a trial and at no time was he permitted to defend himself against the charges for which he was deposed.

He further stated that his father had been charged with the usurpation of power and that at no time had he been guilty of such act, or acts.

said to have asked her if she had any more money and she replied, "Yes, in the bank." She is said to have directed him up Wilmington St. and he is alleged to have stopped on, or near, the corner.

Miss Flipping is said to have written him a check for $200, which he could not read English. The report states that she went into the Mechanics & Farmers Bank and cashed a check for $2.00, because she felt he did not know the denomination of money. She alleges that she returned to the spot where she left the man and the car and both were gone.

The police files described the man as being about 5'10" tall, weighing about 175 lbs, having thick lips, wearing a hat, a black leather coat and having a heavy accent. He was described as a man who used many Spanish words.

The victim valued her overall loss at $250.00.

MASONS MEET

Clark S. Brown of Winston-Salem, the Most Worshiped of Eastern Star, Grand Lodge Master, will preside over the meetings, assisted by his deputies and the Right Worshipful Grand Senior Warden, our own Milton F. Fitch of Wilson. Plans are being made for over one thousand brothers to converge on the city under the supervision of J. M. Miller Jr. and George C. Alexander, Co-chairman. Representation is expected from Mass., Conn., New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia and several other states.

Wilson is known as the city that makes the Grand Masters, the last two having been made here, 1947 and 1959; there are no changes in view for this session.

The opening will be a Memorial Service conducted at the St. John AME Zion Church Monday night at 7:30 p. m. The public is invited to attend this affair and the Fellowship Banquet on Tuesday night at 8 p. m.

The remaining meetings will be closed for the membership only.

poor marksmanship. She said she had recently tried to enroll her daughter in the eighth grade of nearby Glen Allan School, but was refused since that grade was not one of those ordered desegregated by a Federal Court.

White youths on motorbikes followed her home after the attempt, she said. She lives in the straight Bayou Community, 12 miles north of here.

Mrs. Willis said she had become inactive in Civil Rights recently, but that the attack on her daughter made her determined to renew her activity. She said McGee also was a Civil Rights worker.

Sheriff Johnnie Cooper said his office was investigating the incident, but had no leads. The FBI and State police also were looking into the matter.

found gasoline in a can which was offered in evidence as the remaining portion that Brown bought to make a "human torch" out of the woman.

The State also placed a nurse on the stand who said that the Currie woman told her that Brown "did it." Former deputy sheriff, Elease Garner, also testified that the woman told him at the hospital that Brown had accused her of "running around."

There was evidence produced in Brown's behalf that tended to show that Brown was out with one Dora Strickland as late as 10 p. m. on the night that the Currie woman was fatally burned. Grady Matthews was brought from the State Prison, where he is now serving time for breaking and entering and testified that the Currie woman visited his house, with one Hurley Lutterlow on March 14 and 15 in 1946. Lutterlow testified that he took the woman home about 11:30 or 12, on the night that she was burned. Brown attempted to explain the reason for having the gas, by saying, "It was for a stranded motorist."

coming thru Stronach Alley. I immediately realized they were the two men I saw holding up the whiskey store. I moved to the back of my truck and watched the two men crouch down. When Williford realized I saw him, he said, 'Here is a s-o-b got some money and I ought to kill him'. He pointed the shot gun at me and I said 'White folks, I don't have any money.' Williford told Squires, 'He ain't got nothing and ain't worth killing,' it was then that I folded my hands over my stomach where I would not have much to do to get my hand on the pistol."

Squires walked west through the alley and Hunter says he kept an eye on Williford and pulled the gun and shot at Squires. This shot went over Squires' head. "I could have torn him to pieces, but I was too nervous to take aim" said Hunter. Williford is said to have retreated thru Stronach Alley and Hunter took dead aim at him, just as he darted into Blount St. This is believed to have been one of the bullets that cracked Williford's knee.

Hunter, with Squires departing the alley and feeling that he had hit Williford, gave chase of Williford. The two, with Williford leading, went down Blount St. and turned into Lenoir. Hunter says that he then had a chance to take another aim and this he did. Williford was beginning to weaken and made it to Fayetteville St., where a bus was taking on passengers. Hunter alleges that Williford pushed a Negro woman passenger aside and rushed into the bus. Hunter, hot in pursuit, pistol in hand, attempted to get on the bus, but was prevented by the bus driver.

By the time Hunter got back to the store, it was filled with detectives and police. Hunter is alleged to have told them that Williford got on a bus headed up Fayetteville St. One of the officers overlooked the bus and found Williford bleeding profusely. He took him off and carried him to the hospital.

Things began to move into place from then on. A key, taken from Williford's pocket, revealed that it was to a room in the Andrew Johnson Hotel. Police, with a description of Squires, staked themselves in the hotel and it was not long before Squires walked in. Squires formerly lived at 506 Cutler St., but recently moved into room 318 in the Andrew Johnson Hotel. Williford comes from Fuquay Springs and at one time lived at 307 Kinsey St. He was listed as living in room 302 in the Andrew Johnson Hotel.

It is believed that Squires is Boyd Baxter Squires, who recently was paroled from the State Prison and has since worked for Peden Steel Company.

The robbery took Thomas R. Freeman, Jr. and James W. Edwards, the two men working in the store at the time, by surprise. Freeman told the CAROLINIAN that the two men walked in the store, amidst the normal Tuesday evening business. There was no other customer in the store. They ordered a pint of vodka, when he, Freeman, turned to get the vodka, Williford told him it was a "stick-up" and Freeman turned around and found himself looking down the barrels of a sawed-off shot gun.

One man, which turned out to be Squires, lifted the gate of the counter and told Freeman to open the cash register. Freeman complied, with no hesitancy. Squires is alleged to have scooped up the paper money in that register and then proceeded to walk over to the other one, manned by James W. Edwards. The same procedure was followed. With the money in Squires possession it was suggested that the two be taken in the back room and bound but the idea was abandoned when Robert Wood walked in and ordered some whiskey, unconscious of the hold-up. The robbers are said to have told Wood, "Give us what you got too." Wood readily responded and left the store without the whiskey or the money.

William Cooper, manager of the ABC Store, was in the back and found it convenient to remain there, during the robbery. He says he knew something was going on wrong when he heard the rumbling.

Williford is confined to a local hospital, under guard, while Squires is being detained in the Wake County Jail, facing a $5,000 bond, on the robbery charge, and violation of his parole.

The Detective Department, from Captain Goodwin down to the officer who found the gun, used in the hold-up, early Wednesday morning, in the backyard of 508 S. Blount St., was loud in his praise for Hunter. One detective told The CAROLINIAN, when asked if Hunter could be charged with carrying a gun, replied, "No, we should give him a medal."

Since the Easter Seal Research Foundation was formed in 1954, it has invested more than $2 million in seeking causes and prevention of physical disabilities.

Klan Trial Postponed

SMITHFIELD - The trial of four Ku Klux Klansmen charged with attempting to influence a jury member has been postponed until Feb. 6 here. Judge William Bickett, of Raleigh, rescheduled the Johnston Superior Court trial of William Hardison; brothers James Vernon and Jessie McLamb; and Sherill Bass, all of Dunn. Three of the defendants are farmers and Bass is a railroad employee.

The men are charged with asking William Lee Stancl, 45, of Benson, to vote "not guilty" in the June trial of James Harold Hilburn who was charged with the robbery of a Negro hitchhiker.
