Mrs. Geraldine Henderson, a housewife, led the class of 1967, in its 90th finals, as she graduated Magna Cum Laude. Mrs. Henderson dropped out of school and married. She is the wife of a soldier and has traveled extensively with her husband in fields of combat. She finished high school and matriculated at Fayetteville. She is a mother and divided her time between looking after her family and studying. It is apparent that she did alright by both.

President Rudolph Jones of Fayetteville State College conferred baccalaureate degrees on 138 candidates, at the 90th annual commencement exercises, on Sunday, May 28, in the J. W. Seabrook Auditorium.

Bottom left, Eddie Lamar Herring, 17, who also pleaded guilty and is awaiting the results of the investigation before being sentenced. Wife And Mother In Top Spot

DURHAM - Local police are puzzled as to the motive in the killing of a housewife about 1:00 a.m. Tuesday and are holding her husband while they investigate.

Emory Lowell Rollins, 33, was in police custody today for investigation of murder in the shotgun slaying of his wife, Helen, at their four-room apartment at F-3 Mutual Drive, during wee hours today.

Police, upon arrival at the scene shortly after 3 a.m., reported finding the Negro woman lying in bed, covered with a sheet and blanket, with a shotgun wound of the left cheekbone.

Discovered underneath the bed covering were an empty 16 gauge shotgun shell and a 16 gauge automatic shotgun with the barrel extending across the victim's arm.

Patrolman R. H. Cameron, in a written report, stated he answered the call to the couple's apartment along with Lt. W. R. Evans and officers R. L. Hayes and C. Gooche, after Rollins, who told police he is a chemist at the Veterans Administration Hospital, telephoned a report that "his wife had been accidentally shot."

When officers arrived, Rollins was seated beside the front door and reportedly pointed toward a back bedroom in which the woman's body was found. Police quoted County Coroner Dr. D. R. Perry as saying the victim died of a single shotgun wound about 1 a.m.

A further investigation was being made today by Police Detectives Jack Holt and R. D. Ray.

Traffic Toll Takes Twist

Death on North Carolina highways took a different twist during the past weekend when two persons died from having thrown themselves into the path of oncoming cars, by lying down in the highway. The strange accidents happened in Rockingham County.

At 12:45 a.m. Friday, Walter Edward Mullins, Jr., 35, Rt. 5, Reidsville was struck by an auto as he sprawled himself on U. S. 158, 2.1 miles east of Reidsville. No reason was given for his lying down in the road.

On or about 3:55 a.m. Saturday, Mosell Bates, 30, of Spray, is said to have made her body a target for traffic as she laid down on N. C. 87, 1.2 miles north of Leaksville. The scene of this death was in Rockingham County.

In Raleigh, Frank Hake, 70, 285 Freeman St., is said to have walked into the path of a car at 3:00 a.m. Friday. Highway patrolman reported that J. D. Howard, Durham, Ala. was killed as he walked into a car as it traveled on I-85, 300 feet north of Charlotte about 1:00 a.m. Saturday. Howard was listed as being 25 years old.

Brooke On Peace Mission

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) - Sen. Edward W. Brooke has arrived on a two-fold mission that could bring peace both to Vietnam and the Middle East.

The Massachusetts Senator has already been to the Vietnam area and to Israel.

His Southeast Asia tour was an attempt to see if any understanding with North Vietnamese officials could be reached to end the war.

In Israel, his visit had no announced purpose, but is likely to result in closer economic ties between Israel and the United States.

His newest peace move is attendance at a conference sponsored by the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, where he hopes to meet with

Three Join Duke Univ. Alumni

DURHAM - There was no hysteria here when Wilhelm Reuben, Mary Mitchell Harris and Nathaniel White received their degrees from Duke University at its commencement exercises and became the first Negroes to become members of the Alumni Association from the under graduate school.

In many ways, they are no different than their classmates. They have worked just as hard to earn the degrees. And their hopes for the future are just as bright.

But in one major respect, Mimi, Mary and Buddy are unique. They are what remains of the first group of undergraduate Negro students admitted by Duke.

The group was never large. It consisted of only five members back in 1963. In the course of the four-year long quest in sheepskins, one of that number left school to take a job and a second to join the armed forces.

Mimi and Buddy plan to continue their studies beyond Monday's commencement both aiming toward Ph. D. degrees. Mary who attended one session of summer school and thus was able to complete her studies in psychology and pre-medicine last January, now is married and working at Duke's Aging Center. She, too, hopes to do graduate study eventually.

Mimi will begin work toward her doctorate in American studies next fall at Harvard University with the aid of a coveted Woodrow Wilson fellowship. Her ultimate goal is a career as a college professor.

The academic atmosphere will be nothing new to her. Her father is president of Morris College, Sumter, S. C., and is currently completing requirements for his Ph. D. degree in theology at Duke. Mimi's mother, holder of a doctorate from Columbia University, is professor of American history at Morris.

WEEKLY LEGISLATIVE REPORT

NOTE: This is the sixteenth of a series of weekly summaries prepared by the legislative staff of the Institute of Government on the work of the North Carolina General Assembly of 1967. It is confined to discussions of matters of general interest and major importance.

Jail Reform and Corrections

According to the 1967 Survey for the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice, "filth, neglect and maladministration still accurately describe the role and status of jails and short-term institutions in the United States" with "no significant progress having been made in the past 50 years in the vast majority of city and county jails..." This statement probably represents an accurate picture of the jail situation in North Carolina today. Jails in this State, often housing in the same facility untried prisoners, short term misdemeanants, those awaiting appeal, children, alcoholics and in some cases even the insane, generally are understaffed, poorly equipped, unsanitary and unsafe. In an effort to upgrade jails this General Assembly, sparked by the Legislative Research Commission, has launched a two-pronged attack aimed toward immediate as well as long range improvements. Looking to the future, a measure creating an eleven member Jail Study Commission (HR 500-SR 290, ratified May 23) will permit the exploration of subjects such as the economic feasibility of local governments maintaining jails, the use of local jails for non-criminal types such as alcoholics, mental patients and children. The proper role of the state and local government in jail administration and the lack of juvenile detention facilities for children awaiting juvenile court action. The Commission will report its findings and make its recommendations to the 1969 General Assembly.

SB 289 (and its House counterpart HB 591), ratified May 24, represents an effort to do something now to improve jail conditions and to provide for the basic needs of prisoners. For example, the bill requires the Commissioner of Welfare to develop minimum jail standards "with a view to providing secure custody of prisoners, and to protect their health, comfort and welfare." A new and more practical enforcement procedure is established requiring, essentially, that local jails meet such standards or anyone's definition of civil rights.

"You can't take an entire race and say they all feel this way or that way about any specific issue," she argues.

Mimi has found her race to be neither handicap nor help at Duke. During her first year, she was a bit annoyed by the DUKE HISTORY MAKERS - These three firsts are shown as they prepare to receive their degrees at Duke University Monday. They were the first of their race to get undergraduate degrees from the famed institution. "Mimi" Reuben is shown on the left. She not only graduated but proved to be quite popular, during her four years and made history as "Miss Queen" during Spring Formalities. Her first name is Wilhelm.
