 Jones added.
 (This was possibly an allusion to a statement by Powell's estranged wife that the ex-Congressman once had told her he was not a Negro.)
 Jones went on to say that Powell "overstretched the championship of the Negroes, and he has had reverses in terms of the established Negro leadership -- NAACP and the Urban League."
 The former county leader said he and Powell had had their differences, but the two were never enemies. "Powell had great potential for good, but it has now dissipated," Jones concluded.
 Meanwhile, Powell was assured that Harlemites were still behind him "come hell or high water." The assurance came from the Harlem Protestant council, which urged the Bimini vacationer to return home.
 "We have kept the faith, watched, waited, and prayed, and with the (U. S. Supreme) court's decision (declining to rule in Powell's case), it is going to be a long hot summer," the council said in a telegram.
 "The battlefield is not the island of Bimini, but the streets of Harlem which you, are our leader, were elected from."

IMPERSONATOR

 soon found out that things are not always the way they seem.
 Once in Smith's lair, McCulloch alleges that he was forced to write a check for $25, due to the fact he did not have any money, which he alleges was given to Smith, in what he termed armed robbery. Stephen Wayne Smith reported that he was relieved of his watch and $41.00.
 The complaint did not state what tactics the accused man used to lure the men, except the dress and an endearing appeal. They alleged that once in the apartment they discovered that Smith did not possess the female qualities that the dress dictated. They left what they took to be a bedecked dame and made their way to the police station, where they swore out warrants. The police visited the impersonator and found what they termed an attractive human, with all the adornment mentioned above and dangling ear rings. They placed the questionable subject under arrest and "it" is now being detained in the men's section of the temporary Wake County jail, under a $5,000 bond for armed robbery.

SUMMER

 The CAROLINIAN learned that the children entered the Dairy Center and asked to be served. They were said to have been told that they would not be served, by a white woman attendant. Notices is said to have told them that he would serve them. The first one asking for service was Angela Swann, daughter of Earl Swann, the county farm agent. Upon asking the cost she was told that she owed 25¢ for two scoops of ice cream.
 She protested the outrageous charge and requested a receipt. He refused to give her a receipt and told her he could charge anything he wanted, in his place. At this point he is alleged to have ordered them out and when they did not move as swiftly as he desired he is said to have armed himself with a bottle of concentrated ammonia and proceeded to spray them with same.
 Cynthia Jones, a June graduate of South Lumberton High, had it thrown in her eyes. The children were accompanied by Robert McCoy, who has charge of the recreation program, for those who live across the tracks, in South Lumberton. He and a boy were also victims of the random spraying of the ammonia. They were taken to a local hospital and when it was found that their condition was serious, they were sent to Cape Fear Valley Hospital, in Fayetteville.
 This Robeson County capital town has long since been a racial trouble spot and even though David Coletrane organized a Good Neighbor Council here about three years ago, the chairman J. C. Jackson, white pharmacist, has refused to call a meeting. Rev. E. E. Turner, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who has been a member of the City Council, serving one time as mayor-pro-tem, is said to have tried and tried to have Jackson call a meeting, due to the growing tension in the area, but to no avail.

 to Dr. D. R. Perry, county coroner, must have committed the crime about 1 a. m. However, Police Captain Robert Beck says that Rollins came to the Police Station about 3 a. m. and reported that his wife was dead, due to an accidental shooting in the home.
 Beck says that he detected blood on Rollins' coat and sent officers to his home. Investigation officers are said to have found Rollins sitting on the front and that he told them her body was in the back room. They are alleged to have found her body across the bed and the shot gun near her. Under the bed they reported that they found a spent shell. Rollins was then arrested.
 Helen Fines, 18, sister of Mrs. Rollins, testified the couple separated for a short period last summer, and that Mrs. Rollins and their three children moved into the rural Wake County home of her mother.
 She testified that Rollins came to her mother's home during the Labor Day weekend, pointed a shotgun at his wife, and stated he didn't want to kill her, but wanted to hurt her. An argument followed and he fired a shot into the air and left, she testified.
 Mrs. Lottie Dunston of Raleigh, the defendant's mother, testified her son came to her home early Tuesday morning and they drove to Durham in separate cars, and that she took the three children back to Raleigh with her.

 gins right here in North Carolina. Four college freshmen helped give it birth by walking into a Greensboro dime store, sitting down at the lunch counter and ordering cups of coffee. That simple request, within months, to similar demonstrations in cities in the North and South. They succeeded in arousing the conscience of this nation and focused that conscience in a way which produced the Civil Rights Act of 1964.
 "Negro frustration has been simmering for years," Mr. Howe declared. "And Negroes' requests for justice have for the most part been met by apathy at best and repression at worst. Having seen the what, Americans is now wanting the what."
 Referring to "Black Power," the speaker had this to say: "At one end of the spectrum of doctrine, Black Power means a concerted effort by colored people to focus their votes and their purchasing power to influence legislative and employment opportunities. And these demands are fully justified."
 "At the other end of the

Mitchell Has Hopes For New CR Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Hope for passage of a civil rights bill to 1967 has been expressed by Clarence Mitchell, local NAACP chapter director.
 "We have got the votes for civil rights legislation in Congress if we work to get them," Mitchell told about 150 Negro elected Democrats gathered for a two-day workshop conference sponsored by the Democratic National committee.
 He said there was hope that some of the crippling amendments tacked onto the education bill would be removed either in the Senate or House-Senate conference committee, which it must go through.
 Mitchell urged the legislators to mobilize grass roots support for new civil rights legislation by flooding Congress with letters, telegrams, and telephone calls.
 The politicians attending the conference seemed to lean toward the use of politics, rather than demonstrations or angry talk, to achieve the Negro's goals.
 Mrs. Barbara Jordan, a Houston attorney who became Texas' only Negro state senator last January, said she does not condemn the "black power" push but prefers to work through the political process to further the Negro's objectives.

 According to Carl H. Russell, mayor pro-tem, Winston-Salem, "Public demonstrations have served their purpose. Now it's up to the courts and the politicians."
 Mose Cooper, the first Negro elected to the six - member council in Hilton, Ga., said "Black power people only make things worse. I'm trying to get my people more interested in government so they can have a better chance."
 However Edward Davis, vice president, Akron (Ohio) City Council, cited the role "Black power" plays in "doing something to rouse people from their apathy and keep elected officials awake."
 And Mrs. Yvonne Bradshaw, Los Angeles member of the California state legislature, noted that "blackpower", while it is an overstatement, shocks society into dealing with problems it would otherwise ignore.

Bahamian Picked To Receive Lovejoy Award

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. - Grand Exalted Ruler Hobson R. Reynolds of the Improved, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of the World, announced that the Honorable Lynden Oscar Pinckling Premier of the Bahama Islands, has been selected to receive the 1967 Lovejoy Award.
 Reynolds added that the coveted Elks citation would be presented to Premier Pinckling at the public meeting of the Elks Civil Liberties Department on Monday, August 28, at 2 p. m. during the 68th Grand Lodge Convention to be held in Los Angeles, Calif., at the Statler-Hilton Hotel.
 The Hon. Lynden Oscar Pinckling, Premier and minister for Tourism and Development, is the second man to head a Government in the Bahamas since the Tiny Colony adopted a Ministerial Form of Government in January, 1964, and the first to be so chosen under its new Constitution.
 Previous Lovejoy recipients were: New Jersey Governor Alfred E. Driscoll; Ralph Bunche; Branch Pickett; Mary McLeod Bethune; Thurgood Marshall; Marian Anderson; Martin Luther King; Philip Randolph; Lester Granger; John H. Johnson; Attorney General of Massachusetts; Connecticut State Treasurer Gerald A. Lamb; Georgia State Senator Leroy Johnson; Harry Golden-Publisher and author; Whitney Young, Executive Director of the National Urban League; and Dr. Robert C. Weaver, First Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Blasts Carmichael

BALTIMORE (UPI) - Displays of anger by Stokely Carmichael are hurting the Negro's cause, said Clifford L. Alexander, a deputy special counsel to President Johnson.
 When the angry displays are over, "no Negro I know" will have a better job or education, Alexander said, criticizing Carmichael for reportedly ignoring "most Negroes and not being "constructive" in his approach to problems.
 "The display of anger is a luxury the Negro can't afford," said Alexander, who was brought up in Harlem.
 Carmichael's anger and alignment of some leaders with the peace movement have drawn attention away from the "most important issue," the 1967 Civil Rights Bill, Alexander added.

When they build their real homes and living becomes more practical...

they'll cool with electric air conditioning

Make-Believe is fun, but when these youngsters start keeping house "for real" they'll want electric air conditioning for their families. You don't have to wait to enjoy its refreshing benefits.
 Stiffing summer heat puts the body under stress. The heart works harder and vitality is sapped. Irritability increases, efficiency decreases.
 Cool, invigorating electric air conditioning keeps the family feeling fresh all day and all night long. It filters air to reduce dust and pollen, and squeezes out excess moisture to eliminate summer's mugginess.
 A central electric system improves livability and the future value of your home. So join the happy families who breeze through summer the electric way. Call or visit our nearest office for all the refreshing facts.
