GREENSBORO - Quiet prevailed in the racially tense Holts Chapel Rd. section just outside the city limits of Greensboro Tuesday as city police joined the Guilford County Sheriff's department in patrolling the area near the home of the Rev. Frank Williams. Williams, a 27-year-old minister, his wife and three-year-old son have been harassed continuously since they moved into an all-white neighborhood four weeks ago. A group of about 25 men, described by Williams as being members of the Ku Klux Klan, marched in front of his home for a short time Monday night. Williams' next door neighbor, Herb Meadows, said some of the men were armed. David S. Coltrane, chairman of the North Carolina Good Neighbor Council, termed the situation "explosive" after conducting a meeting Tuesday afternoon in the offices of the Greensboro Human Relations Commission. Coltrane, sent here by Gov. Dan K. Moore, said this after he heard Williams recount the numerous incidents of harassment - people shouting obscenities at his family, broken windows and a shattered automobile windshield, and the marchers. Coltrane, also heard Williams say he was going to continue to allow armed protectors to stay in his home. Several "interested members of the Negro community" armed with (See PROTECTED, P. 2)

Militant Group Not Hindered

BOSTON - The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People - the nation's largest and oldest civil rights organization - showed a slight increase in membership and a more substantial income gain in 1966 despite diversionary activity on the part of some forces which had formerly given support to the Fight for Freedom.

"Because all the hopes of 1963-65 had not been fully realized, there were those - particularly among the newcomers to the movement - whose chagrin in nurtured frustration and defeatism generated a hazy belief that the movement was headed toward 'disintegration,'" stated the NAACP annual report which was released today here and in New York City. The 88-page report, released by NAACP Executive Director Roy Wilkins on the eve of the Association's 58th annual convention to be held here July 10-15, noted that in the face of this defeatism many of the young white students "who had participated valiantly in the perilous work in the Deep South found a new outlet for their talents, energies and devotion in the peace movement."

"Certain of the young black activists sought refuge in racial isolation limiting, when not excluding, participation of non-Negroes in the struggle for racial equality." (See MILITANT, P. 2)

WEATHER

Temperatures during the period of Thursday through Monday will be below normal. Daytime highs are expected to be in the 70s in the mountains and upper 80s on the N. C. coast and mostly in the lower 80s elsewhere. Temperatures will be warm at night and rather hot in afternoon, with expected thunder showers. Precipitation will total from less than 1-4 of an inch to as much as 20 percent of an inch, occurring as scattered afternoon and evening thunder showers Friday through Monday.

NAACP EXECUTIVE PRESENTED CITATION - Boston: Massachusetts Governor John A. Volpe (L), presents a Citation from the people of the commonwealth to Roy Wilkins (C), executive director of the NAACP, as Mayor John F. Collins of Boston, looks on. The presentation was prior to the NAACP's 58th annual convention which opened here July 10, with Wilkins making a keynote address. (UPI PHOTO).

Dunn Judge Issues Work Or Jail Order

DUNN - Harnett County citizens are wondering whether the county is going to practice a legal peonage system, as the result of an order by Judge Woodrow Hill Monday. The judge ordered his law enforcement agency to arrest all persons, whom they felt were able to work and not working for vagrancy and bring them to his court. He stated that he would send them to the "road." He did that when police officers brought James Mozingo, Richard Smith and James Leslie Smith into court. They were charged with vagrancy and put under $100 bonds. There again more burden is placed on those arrested, due to the fact they have to find the money to pay the bondsmen. Local citizens feel that it is a vicious circle and that the order was directed at Negroes. Mozingo said that he had orders from the judge, to arrest the two men again, if they were seen on the street and not working. It has caused much concern (See JUDGE, P. 2)

KLAN 'WELCOME' - This sign has been erected on property owned by Jesse J. Matthews, a local heating contractor, off U. S. 301 south. Matthews said Klan representatives signed a five-year lease on the nine by 22-foot sign supported by poles placed in three holes. (PHOTO COURTESY OF FAYETTEVILLE OBSERVER BY SHAW)

FIRST NEGRO ASTRONAUT

- El Segundo, Calif.: Maj. Robert H. Lawrence Jr., the first Negro military astronaut, speaks to newsmen following the June 30 announcement that he and three other military astronauts have been named by the Air Force for its Manned Orbiting Laboratory. The four aerospace research pilots will join 12 other Air Force officers who will train for the military's first manned space program, scheduled for launch in 1970. (UPI PHOTO).

KKK Sets Sights In New Spot

FAYETTEVILLE - Fayetteville has joined a growing number of N. C. areas which find themselves labeled "Klan country."

A billboard urging motorists to "Join and support the United Klans of America, Inc." has been erected just outside the Fayetteville city limits on U. S. Highway 301.

A smaller sign on a nearby tree announces that "A Knight of the Ku Klux Klan is near."

Identical signs appeared in Harnett County some months ago and Klan recruiting posters sprouted from telephone poles beside N. C. Highway 54 in Chapel Hill this spring. Harnett Countians were upset about the signs because they feared the Klan advertising would give the county a "bad image."

In Chapel Hill posters urged townspeople to "Help Fight (See KKK, P. 2)

Nabbed In New York And N. C.

CHARLOTTE - FBI officials here said yesterday they are investigating the possibility that four men charged with the July 5 robbery of a Winston-Salem bank were involved in other crimes.

The four, Raymond Otea Banner, Willie Cuffie "Spike" Jones, James Wilson and James J. Cook, were arrested in New York City and Winston-Salem. Banner and Jones, both of 310 State St. in Winston-Salem, were arrested in New York following a high-speed automobile chase through Manhattan.

Wilson, of 1124 E. 18th St. in Winston-Salem and Cook, no address available, were arrested yesterday in East Winston. They are being held in Forsythe County jail under $25,000 bond each.

The four are charged with robbing the Ogburn Station branch of the Northwestern Bank. The robbery netted $19,376, but the FBI had released no information on whether the money has been recovered and on what part each of the alleged robbers played in the crime.

The FBI apparently was investigating the possibility that the four men were involved in (See NABBER, P. 2)

BOMBED-OUT-AREA - Wadesboro: Five bombs hit the Anson County area here early June 30th, including this "lodge" by county education board member Bill Stegall. Stegall and other board members have been working for peaceful integration of the county's schools this fall. (UPI PHOTO).

WEEKLY LEGISLATIVE REPORT

NOTE: This is the twenty-first of a series of weekly summaries prepared by the legislative staff of the Institute of Government on the work of the North Carolina General Assembly of 1967. It is confined to discussions on matters of general interest and major importance.

A Review of the 1967 General Assembly - Part II

The previous issue of the Weekly Summary reviewed the work of the 1967 General Assembly in four major areas: court organization and procedure, water resources, prison and jail administration, and taxes. With this issue we complete this two part resume' by reviewing the 1967 legislation concerning educational policy, elections, health and welfare and business activity.

Education: Throughout this spring the General Assembly has wrestled with questions of educational policy. For the most part, following the lead of Governor Moore and the Board of Higher Education, the Assembly took a conservative view of proposed departures from present State policy. Thus, the Assembly turned down requests to make East Carolina College a separate State University; to move the office of the President of the Consolidated University from Chapel Hill to Raleigh; to revamp the UNC Board of Trustees; and (in the field of public school education) to crack the Administration budget line on teacher pay increases, originally 17.58% and later raised to 20%. Late in June, however, a break was finally made in this pattern (See EDUCATION, P. 2)

Durham Man Convicted In Second Dope Trial

DURHAM - Samuel Jerome "Rip" Alston, who waived the service of a court-appointed lawyer and was convicted here Monday on two counts of illegal possession of marijuana, has appealed his case to the State Supreme Court.

Alston allegedly sold $50.00 worth of marijuana to Gossie Hudson, a former teacher at Hillside High here. Hudson said he then gave the drug to Al Blount, a federal agent posing as a musician.

Alston said Blount went with him to Alston's home but did not go inside with him. "I paid Rip $50 for the marijuana," the former teacher said. "I got the money from Al and I gave the stuff to Al." Hudson was indicted in the case but was allowed to plead guilty to forcible trespass.

The trap for Alston was sprung by Blount, Frank Epps, an agent of the State Bureau of Investigation, and Durham detectives Wallace Upchurch and Tom Hicks. Alston, 32, of 607 Linwood Ave., was arrested last December and charged with possession of 11 tin-foil-wrapped packets of marijuana. Arresting officers also charged that he sold it on two occasions to Hudson.

Alston's Monday trial was his second. He was acquitted once before on one count of illegal possession of marijuana, and his current case ended twice in mistrials because the jury could not agree. Alston, who said "I think I can defend myself as well as any lawyer can," when asked if he wanted a court-appointed lawyer, was sentenced to five years in prison by Superior Court Judge W. H. S. Burgwyn.

On notice of appeal, Burgwyn set bond at $5,000 for (See DURHAM, P. 12)

From Raleigh's Official Police Files THE CRIME BEAT

Lesson Learned

Maurice Mitchell Howard 303 Dorothea Dr., had to have a little boy teach her a lesson Friday. She reported to police that she had Lawrence Evans, 10, go with her to pay her bills and buy her groceries. With the groceries bought and the bills paid, they started back home, but suddenly Lawrence had to go to the bathroom, taking the bags with him. He came back with the bags but Maurice's pocket book was gone.

Knife Used

Effie Smith, 1823 Charles St., resented the way Donnie Rowland, 27, 867 Hadley Rd., treated her Friday afternoon. She alleges that about 7 p. m. Rowland forced his way into her house, by breaking the lock on the front door and upon entering he took a butcher knife and threatened her. She signed a warrant for his arrest, in which he was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and damage to property. (See CRIME BEAT, P. 3)

Sweepstakes Cash Is Doubled

Sweepstakes batted 1000 last week and came back this week and batted exactly 0. This means that all the money in last week's jack pot was paid to winners, but this week there was not a winner and the result is that this week's money will be twice what it would be. There is $100.00 available. You should go after some of this money. Just watch the paper and go to as many of the stores as you feel you need to purchase something from and pick up a ticket.

There is a store for practically everything you need. Read the Sweepstakes page and visit the stores. They will be happy to serve you and feel that it is a pleasure to give you a ticket. If it is the (See SWEEPSTAKES, P. 2)
