Upon arriving at the parking lot they are said to have been approached by Jones, who brandished a small caliber pistol and demanded the money. He is said to have shot the enlisted man and to have taken the loot. Roadblocks were set up immediately by MPs and every road, leading from the area, was covered. His arrest followed.

When apprehended, Jones was carrying a small caliber pistol, plus two .45s which authorities said he took from the guard and finance officer.

Military authorities said their investigation indicated that Jones acted alone in the holdup.

All of the $31,000 was recovered.

later and found Singletary still there. Aikens is reported as having pointed the gun at Singletary.

Singletary then shot Aiken and later leveled on Donaldson, the owner, who fell mortally wounded. There were two quirks to the shooting. Richard White was wounded with a bullet that is believed to have already passed through the body of one of the victims. The other happened when Donaldson was being taken to the hospital. Mrs. Ellen Pierce of Cary, was riding in the car that was taking Donaldson and was injured when the car ran a red light and was hit by another car.

Singletary was given a hearing Tuesday and was bound over to Lee County Superior Court. Bond was set at $2,000. The defendant is said to be married and lives on Booker St.

Dr. Robinson assumed his duties as St. Augustine's eighth president on Feb. 27, 1967. He is a native of Batesburg, S. C.

He was graduated from Voorhees High School and Junior College in Denmark. His college degree was earned at St. Augustine's College in 1946 where he majored in history-social science.

Dr. Robinson holds the M. A. and Ed. D. degrees in social science - educational psychology, and sociology-educational administration respectively from Cornell University.

President Robinson has had varied and wide experiences as a college teacher, registrar, director of public relations; a high school principal.

He was appointed Dean of the College and Professor of Sociology at St. Augustine's College in 1956; executive dean in 1964; and acting president of St. Augustine's College, June 1, 1966.

The new president is actively involved in religious and civic programs. He is affiliated with many professional organizations. Honors and recognition have been given him, as an outstanding teacher, by St. Augustine's College; university fellowship from Cornell University; and a U. S. Fulbright Fellowship to lecture and study in India.

METHODIST

Council of Churches dealing with Vietnam. One asked for a halt in the bombing of North Vietnam for an unspecified period of time to allow the United Nations to consider the question. The other requested the U. S. to prod the Saigon government to establish social justice in South Vietnam, or else the U. S. should re-examine its commitments in Vietnam.

The Woman's Division mapped a broad scope of political activities to focus public attention on issues in the 1968 general election. In addition, the Division adopted all the recommendations of its National Seminar, held in Kansas City Mo., Aug. 1-10. The recommendations as approved urged widespread observance of 1968 as the International Year of Human Rights and called on the Senate to ratify four United Nations covenants on human rights. Other recommendations called for multilateral foreign aid through the U. N., a minimum subsistence level in federal and state welfare programs and the provision of quality education for all persons.

Anticipating union of the Methodist women, in cooperation with other women's religious groups, to protest the storage of nuclear warheads in Canada and other countries, by letters, telegrams and other communications to the President. Strongly recommending action in cooperation with other faiths and other women's groups, the Division detailed yearlong observances in 1968 of the International Year of Human Rights, and urged speedy Senate ratification of the U. N. covenants on forced labor slavery, the political rights of women, and Genocide as a priority.

Reaffirming The Methodist Church's traditional opposition to gambling, the women urged passage of a bill, approved by the House and now in a Senate subcommittee, which would restrict banking institutions insured under the Federal Deposit Insurance Act from being agents for lotteries.

Acknowledging an invitation from the NAACP Youth Council of Milwaukee to join open-housing marches in that city, the women encouraged efforts to secure the adoption of open housing legislation and urged Methodist women toward open occupancy in their communities.

In addition to the political action called for to implement their recommendations and resolutions, the Woman's Division proposed a "legislative bulletin" of priority items, and the sponsorship of citizenship meetings, brunches and coffee houses to inform Methodists of the issues and candidates in the 1968 elections. Also proposed were the organization of citizen inquiry groups to provide an open forum for candidates and discussion, and the creation of a "check list" on human rights for use in the 1968 political campaign.

The inclusion of human rights emphases in world understanding workshops, summer schools, citizenship brunches, and jurisdiction, conference and district meetings in 1968 was encouraged. Topics suggested were the issues of war and peace, and programs in such human rights areas as poverty, housing, education, Appalachia and full citizenship for all Americans.

to quiet the discontent in Durham, we must move to meet the basic causes of this discontent.

At one point it was asserted: "We believe that to continually push Negroes into well-defined areas will create animosities which could become as explosive as Watts, Hough (Cleveland), Newark or Detroit. Should this happen, then the blame can be placed squarely on the shoulders of those who are the disciples of this "intellectual dishonesty."

The statement to Weaver said, "If you do not wish to aid us in the perpetuation of progress, then we shall not aid you in the preservation of peace."

Other speakers were Dr. ay Thompson, Eugene Hampton, Ben Ruffin, Dr. A. B. Moseley, Rev. V. E. Brown and a man who said he was Mityehh Kiyam.

According to the Labor Department's Bureau of Statistics, service jobs in the Chicago metropolitan area increased by 24 per cent between 1959 and 1965, and by 65 per cent in the suburbs.

For manufacturing jobs, the respective figures were 6 and 27 per cent; for retail trade jobs, 16 and 17 per cent.

Thus, it is seen that almost all the gain in jobs is in the predominantly white suburbs, to which few Negroes have ready access.

A survey by Tri-Faith Employment found that only 19 per cent of its applicants—most of them Negroes have access to cars during working hours.

Some Negroes who have cars have turned down jobs in the suburbs because they don't care to drive several hours a day to and from work.

Thus, housing segregation, as well as relocation of many firms in the suburbs, is playing havoc with Negro job opportunities.

As the Rev. Jesse Jackson, director, Operation Breadbasket, put it, "The number of jobs in the metropolitan area has increased during the last few years.

"Yet, unemployment among black people has increased because, during that time, jobs have moved farther away."

He estimated that Chicago has been losing about 13,000 jobs a year as plants move to the suburbs.

Chicago Urban League spokesman said they get job orders from many suburban companies, but such requests go unfilled because Negroes can't get to the jobs.

What is the answer to the problem?

"Suitable housing must be provided so that ordinary unskilled, semi-skilled, and service workers can live within reasonable commuting distance of their jobs," according to Samuel C. Bernstein, administrator, Illinois Bureau of Employment Security.

Negroes and other minority group workers who qualified and willing to accept the numerous jobs now going begging in the suburbs must be encouraged to become residents in the area in which the jobs are located, Bernstein added.

Meanwhile, the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development offered financial help to local transportation systems that help inner-city residents reach suburban jobs.
