Wiggins, who lives at 220 S. East St., but a native of New York, bumped into Chester Cornell Burnett, 20, 718 E. Hargett St., reported to be the son of a minister, and Cornelius Douglas, 18, 3 Bladen St., as they emerged from a door in the 500 block of S. Blount.

The contact with the two is alleged to have caused wounds to be passed by the three. Wiggins is alleged to have continued north on Blount, with the two in pursuit. The two pursuers are said to have caught up with Wiggins, after he crossed Cabarrus St., and to have grabbed him. The information further revealed that Wiggins was able to free himself from their entanglement and to have started running. It was then that one of the two is alleged to have fired three shots, one of which struck Wiggins in the back of the head.

James A. Pierce, a traffic officer, is said to have been in the area and saw Wiggins fall. He is alleged to have run to Wiggins' aid, but found that he had been mortally wounded. Pierce saw two men fleeing the scene, but was unable to get a vivid description of them.

Officers began working on the case and reported that they had cleared it with the arrest of Burnett and Douglas Saturday. Douglas was arrested Friday and charged with carrying a 25 caliber pistol. He was released on a $100,000 bond in this case, but was rearrested when he alighted from a cab, which is reported to have taken him to the home of a girl friend in Walnut Terrace. Officers, who had been looking for Burnett, spotted him on Camden St., around the corner from his home. The two are being held in Wake County jail and are scheduled for a hearing before Magistrate Brooks W. Poole, 2

Wiggins' mother is reported as having come to Raleigh Saturday and to have taken the body back to New York. A roommate of Wiggins told the CAROLINIAN that he was going to attend the funeral in New York Thursday, which will be held at St. Phillips Episcopal Church. He is survived by his mother and grandparents.

Wiggins is said to have left his room in a building which is part of the John Winters Complex, on East St., to go to the campus of Shaw University. It is believed that Blount St. was the route that he and many other boys, who live in the building and attend the university live, use daily. It was reported that he had visited the campus and was returning to his room when he met his death.

ASTRONAUT

Among survivors are his wife, Barbara; his son, Tracey, 8; mother, Mrs. G. W. Duncan, father, Robert H. Lawrence, Sr., and sister, Barbara E. Lawrence.

He was the only astronaut-designee in the Air Force's Manned Orbiting Laboratory program (MOL) with a doctor of philosophy degree -- in physical chemistry -- from Ohio State University.

Had he lived, he might have taken part in a 1970 space flight in a Gemini B capsule, scheduled to orbit the earth for 30 days.

Instead, he returned home to Chicago to stay. And for many of his acquaintances, his final homecoming brought back memories of a studious youngster interested in science -- and an excellent piano player, as well.

As a child, he enjoyed watching airplanes take off and land and made a hobby of building model airplanes.

Eleven years ago, he entered the Air Force through the ROTC program at Bradley University Peoria, Ill., going into flight training after graduation.

He became interested in the space program while at Ohio State University.

Applying for the program in 1965, he became one of 16 persons chosen for astronaut training in June, 1967. He was selected from a field of 500 applicants.

But then, he was wiped out by his lifelong ambition to see the heavens for himself. Thus, he joined other explorers of the world who gave their lives that man's knowledge of his universe might be expanded.

from a hospital bed, where he was taken, after being rescued and was treated for shock and exposure. He also required treatment or head cuts and bruises he received.

He told of how he was awakened and realized that the plane was in a spin. He said he unfastened his seat belt and grabbed what he thought was a seat cushion. When he hit the icy waters of the lake, he says he began swimming. He related how he heard Ron Caldwell, screaming for help, having survived the crash. He says he began swimming toward him, but before he reached him he went down and he knew his efforts were futile.

Falling in this effort to save a life, he heard Carl Cunningham, but he was too far away and he too went down. Thus it is believed that the three lived after the crash, but Caldwell and Cunningham were claimed by the icy waters of the lake.

Redding is said to have been found sitting in the wrecked plane, while the bodies of Richard Fraser, 28, the pilot and Jimmy King, 18, one of the musicians, were found near the wrecked plane. Others known to have lost their lives were Phyllis Jones, 18, and Matthew Kelly, 17.

political climate and the extent of the support for candidacy. Stith is working towards organizing some initial support groups in each of the counties in the district.

A "definite decision" on entering the race is still a few months off Stith said. Factors influencing his decision include the effects of a campaign on his business and professional life and on the "meaningful support" that arises from within the district.

Stith plans to especially seek support in Raleigh and the Wake County area.

A native of Rocky Mount, he has been a resident of Durham for 20 years. He is married to the former Miss Lorraine James of Ahoskie and is the father of two children, a seven year old daughter, Karen and a four-year-old son, Thomas III.

He is a member of the Durham Chamber of Commerce, the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs and is Vice-Chairman of the Board of Directors of United Publishers.

He is a graduate of North Carolina College, where he also did graduate work in the fields of Business Administration and Education. Stith also attended Law School at North Carolina College prior to his service with the Adjutant General's Corps in the U. S. Army.

Waits Hospital, which has been accepted as a white hospital, thru-out the years is also in trouble, and must make certain changes and raise some money in double quick time.

and elect those officials who feel that a man is a man, regardless of race, or color, size or popularity," he said. He also told the audience that qualified Negroes need to run for political office. He said they should run for every position from dog catcher to governor in North Carolina and should even aspire to go to Washington. "Negroes must get to the main stream of policy making and we need not kid ourselves, the politicians control the flow of the main stream," said the prelate.

The tribute to Bishop Hood was arranged by Eureka Lodge # 3, which he founded. Paul Jones, Most Wonderful Master, presided over the meeting. Clark S. Brown, Grand Master, re-echoed what Bishop Shaw said and admonished the brothers to reach for newer horizons, higher goals and a fellowship of brotherhood that symbolizes the tenets of Prince Hall Masonry.

Two of Bishop Hood's descendants, Mrs. Gertrude Smith and Mrs. Jamesena Walker, were guests of the host lodge. They are grand daughters of the founder and live in New York. They also were present at the laying of a wreath on the grave of Bishop Hood Tuesday morning. This part of the centennial celebration of Masonry was under the auspices of the Grand Lodge. Dr. R. Irving Boone, director of Public Relations, gave a memorial meditation.

The Grand Lodge opened at high noon Tuesday and heard reports from state officers, including the Grand Master's address. He outlined goals that he wanted reached by 1980 when the 100th anniversary of the Grand Lodge would be celebrated. He too, touched on the tenets of Free Masonry and called upon an emulation of Hood.

Lt. Gov Robert Scott, unannounced candidate for governor, was the principal speaker at the banquet, held at Fayetteville State College, Tuesday night. General sessions began 9 a. m. Wednesday and were scheduled to continue until the closing of the meet.

"At this point I just don't know," Russell said. "I have my fingers cross. I just hope there won't be another outbreak of violence, such as produced three nights of arson, looting and sniping here starting the day of Eller's funeral."

Eller died two weeks after he was struck with a blackjack, while scuffling with officers in the courthouse. He had been arrested on a drunkenness charge.

WORLDWIDE

He defined the "third world" as the people in Africa, Asia, and other "suppressed parts" of the world.

Later, in Paris, he declared, "We don't want peace in Vietnam. We want the Vietnamese to defeat the United States of America."

"Our aim is to disrupt the United States of America, and we think our blood is not too high a price to pay," he said, apparently referring to black-power advocates in the United States.

Carmichael, one of the jurors at the "War Crimes Tribunal" in Denmark, declared the Vietnamese to be our brothers, "as well as 'our comrades in arms.'"

The fiery black power leader oddly enough had trouble entering France, whose president, Charles de Gaulle, hates the United States only slightly less than Carmichael.

High government officials intervened and reversed a police ruling which would have deported Carmichael.

Police had told him he was an "undesirable character" and held him incommunicado. Even a lawyer hired by French friends was not allowed to see him.

Carmichael, however, said nothing about his treatment, apparently figuring that his enemy's foe is his friend, police abuse notwithstanding.

Brown, like Carmichael, was having his own troubles with the law in the United States, after being indicted for stirring up racial unrest.

And like Carmichael, Brown was talking of armed struggle but in a more specific context. His is against South African whites who control Southwest Africa - a battle with which the United Nations general assembly concurs.

The assembly has adopted a resolution calling for use of armed force to get South Africa

Remember how we used to buy our summer clothes in June? And our winter wrap-ups about the time the first cold front blew in! Heaven only knows how we managed to survive the seasons in between! I'll never forget how warm those wools were in the spring or how cold I'd sometimes get in my cottons in the fall. But there just didn't seem to be anything else to wear during those transitional periods.

Now - lucky for us, we don't have to worry about being half safe anymore! Technology has come to the rescue with new fabrics that span the seasons! Featherweight wool jersey is what makes this Cole of California design perfect to tent in all fall, through winter and into spring. And COIN bonding - a kind of built-in lining created by permanently joining two fabrics together - is what keeps this butter-soft fabric from melting into shapelessness! What COIN does for fabric is much like what hair spray does for hair. It gives it body.

ca to give up Southwest Africa. Brown has sent a letter to UN Secretary General U Thant asking him to endorse the formation of a group of black volunteers to "liberate" Southwest Africa.

The SNCC chairman, however, doubted that the UN would respond, calling it a U. S. dominated institution.
