Sit-In Demonstrations At Columbia U. Come To End As Cops Scatter Students

NEW YORK CITY - Moving in force on the Columbia University campus, after being asked to by the Board of Trustees of the institution, police routed student demonstrators Tuesday from five barricaded campus buildings and ended the seven day sit-in demonstration. Beginning at 2:40 a. m., the students were systematically removed by officers - sometimes violently - in about one hour and fifteen minutes. Over 100 students of both sexes were injured, the majority suffering bruises and cuts about the face and head. More than forty students were treated at an emergency infirmary hastily erected on university grounds. An injured reporter stated that over sixty students received treatment at St. Luke's Hospital. Jailers were 603 persons, 100 of them women. A crowd of some 2,000 gathered to look on as the cops swept through the campus of the Ivy League institution. Officers used nightsticks freely in breaking up the huge crowd and moving it off campus. When mounted officers rode into the surging mass, it scattered in many directions. President of the Student Council Dan Pellgren, announced to a crowd near the besieged Low Library that he was calling a student strike, starting Tuesday. Afternoon classes at Columbia were scheduled to be held. At 6 a. m. (See COLUMBIA U., P. 2)

Dr. Albert N. Whiting Inaugurated As Fourth President Of N.C. College

Twenty-eight heads of colleges and universities were among some 200 representatives of institutions of higher education attending the inauguration of Dr. Albert N. Whiting as the fourth president of North Carolina College, at 3 p. m. Saturday.

He began by saying, "The chief goal of the College and University is to train and develop the human intellect. But it is no longer possible to take a narrow view of intelligence as 'academic knowledge,' isolating cognitive growth from moral growth and the general maturation of the person. This view appears untenable not so much for reasons of philosophy, but rather because our knowledge of the nature of human personality forces us to conclude that cognitive growth which is separated from the development of other aspects of the human personality is illusory or distorted."

Further strengthening his point, he continued, "And as we retreat from the guild - like professionalistic stance to the Gemeinshaft or the quality of small community consensus and interstimulation (See DR. WHITING, P. 2) student into a competent, mature, wise human being, and knowledge alone simply does not guarantee this kind of growth. It comes only when the learning experience has led to the formation of a mental content which includes values, judgments, and commitment, all of which are part of the life of the man who would be considered educated. This instruction, in order to stimulate this, ought to involve communication of the teacher's commitment and search for values in his own life and in the philosophical outreach of his subject matter," he said.

"To this end, we need to re-appraise our teaching in order to shift the emphasis from merely transmitting knowledge to advancing the student's perception of the relationship between the subject matter and the quality of his own life. In this manner the student's feelings as well as his intellect will both be engaged and, hopefully, learning will result in the desired behavioral changes. The teaching relationship, I believe should seek to develop the

T'll Go To Hell,' Says Slain Man

"The way that man was waving that gun, I thought he was going to kill us all," is the way a witness described the killing of a man at her house 217, S. Bloodworth St., at 10:56 p.m. Monday. Gladys Hinton, seated on a couch in the front room of a part ment holding a young baby in her arms, related to The CAROLINIAN Tuesday how Willie Lee Jackson came to the front door of her apartment and sought admittance. The woman said that when Jackson made himself known, even before entering the house, he said, "My wife is in there and I am going to kill somebody." Upon admittance, he is said to have pulled a pistol from his pocket and said "I am going to kill somebody and then go to hell. I am ready to die." She said he began shooting indiscriminately. She, frightened almost out of her wits, took cover. It was then that William Columbus Stewart, 34, 534 E. Davie St., who is said to have been sitting on the bed near the Hinton woman, picked up a rifle and attempted to defend the women and children in the room.

Stewart is said to have been shot through the hand by Jackson, who began to take aim at several persons. Jackson is said to have gone across the hall and to have shot into the door of the Hinton woman's sister. Stewart is said to have finally aimed at Jackson and is said to have hit him in the chest and Jackson fell mortally wounded.

The interview was interrupted several times as children attempted to explain to the press representative about a bad man having been there and how he was killed in the hall. There (See KILLING, P. 2)

Student Aim: To Get The Tar Heel Vote 47-Mile Jaunt Begins Here Thurs.

DURHAM - George K. Butterfield, Jr., a junior at North Carolina College here, and son of a prominent Wilson physician has organized some thirty students at the college who will join him Thursday morning for a forty seven mile walk to Wilson. This is believed to be the first walk of its kind ever staged in North Carolina.

The purpose of the hike is to encourage voters to cast their ballots in Saturday's primary elections, to be held across North Carolina.

According to Butterfield, the group will leave the State Capitol in Raleigh Thursday at 8 a. m. and arrive at the Wilson County Courthouse by noon on Saturday. The towns of Zebulon and Sims have been mapped out for camping during the long trek.

Seeing the students off Thursday morning, according to Mr. Butterfield, will be all of the Negro candidates running for office. The hikers, all from the area of Wilson, "are not walking in behalf of any particular candidate or issue, but are endorsing Dr. Reginald Hawkins, Charlotte dentist-minister and the first Negro ever to run for governor, and Mrs. Eva Clayton for Congress from the Second District." Butterfield informed the press.

Permission was still pending at CAROLINIAN press time for the students to be able to camp on the Capitol grounds. This permission must come from Department of Administration authorities. The camp out was to be held Wednesday night, preceding the walk. If the Capitol site is refused, then the group will make other plans for an alternate camp area.

PROMISED SBI PROTECTION The N. C. College student said the State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) has promised to protect the "walkers" with at least two officers throughout the journey.

A two-way radio hookup will also be attached to an accompanying automobile, Butterfield concluded.

ZION CHURCH BEGINS 38TH QUADRENNIAL DETROIT, Mich. - In the light of the religious world to make a greater appeal by some of the denominations by merger and organic union, one of the top issues that will be discussed by the 477 delegates, 12 bishops and 12 general officers of the AME Zion Church, when the 38th quadrennial session opens here Wednesday will be the matter of merger with the AME and the CME Churches, making a solid phalanx of Negro Methodists, with the hope of complete Methodist union, not later than 1980.

The three predominant Negro Methodist bodies have set 1972 as the target date they will get together. The horizon seems to be closing in because the three have been in consultation with COCU and according to Dr. J. H. Satterwhite, who has been the representative of the AME Zion Church with the other 9 denominations, there is a possibility that the overcast union might come about the same time, or shortly after the target date.

"NO IMMEDIATE DANGER" - Washington: Roy Wilkins, executive director of NAACP (right) said at the White House April 30 he saw "no immediate danger" of the whole American Negro population swinging into wide scale violence.
