

CAUGHT IN BED WITH BRO'S WIFE

MILTON WEBSTER

ULLIS WEBSTER

Big Stick Breaks Up Love Tryst

Milton Webster, 1320 Pender St., was not too well pleased when he got home about 11 o'clock Saturday night and found his wife, Patricia, in bed with his brother, Ullis.

According to police this caused him to get a stick and work furiously on both of them. He told Officer D. Brunson that he spared no energy and worked on both of them with all the strength he could muster. It is believed that the wife suffered a broken arm and Ullis' head showed that it had been worked over very closely. It had bruises practically all over it.

Even though the husband had caught them in what was believed to be the very act, he was arrested and charged with assault with a deadly weapon. Due to the condition of the two beaten persons, it was not determined when he would be brought to trial.

Persons who knew the two brothers were of the opinion that both Ullis and Patricia were lucky that Milton restrained himself. His record at the Raleigh Police Department showed that he was a stranger to the department. Ullis was also listed as having had relationship with the department, even though he is not as old as Milton.

To Bar Extradition Ray To Base Plea On "Political Reasons"

LONDON - A long and bitter fight seems inevitable in the attempt to gain extradition of James Earl Ray, who denies slaying Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

He apparently has everything going for him in his effort to stay out of the United States, where he is wanted not only in the assassination of the civil rights leader, but for breaking jail.

Not only is he protected by British law -- which makes it hard to extradite criminal suspects -- but he can appeal his case repeatedly, all the way to the house of Lords, if he loses.

As an indication of the thinking of Ray and his attorneys, a plea has been entered for political sanctuary.

Under treaties between Britain and the U. S. which date back to the 1870s, there is a prohibition against extraditing a person sought for "an offense of a political character."

This clause was originally inserted to grant sanctuary to opponents of European monarchs and republicans who used the guillotine, scaffold and dungeon to remove their opposition.

About four years ago, the British high courts expanded the criteria for political sanctuary -- previously limited to the planned overthrow of government -- to include opposition to a government's policy or advisors.

It is upon this latter angle that Ray is seeking asylum, for according to his lawyers,

"that is what Dr. King was trying to do (advise government). However, whether Dr. King's (See RAY, P. 2)

Klan Rally Could Cause Trouble

Even though the temperatures have soared to high and very high degrees, during the week, it is believed that with Governor Moore out of the country and Grand Dragon J. Robert

Jones scheduling Ku Klux Klan rallies for the weekend, there is much to be feared for the summer.

With rallies already scheduled for Taylorsville Thursday, Chapel Hill Friday and Wake Forest Saturday there is much speculation that anything can come out of the rallies and that it could be bad, very bad. Jones also announced that there would be one held in Raleigh, at a time yet unannounced. Should it be held it will be the first in almost two years.

The last rally was held August 1966 and except for planned safety rules and regulations, could have gotten out of hand. The recent convictions of persons for dynamiting a car in Lexington and a would-be bombing suspect killed in Alabama, any meeting of the Klan here would not be conducive to good relations, according to those who are trying to nurture the cause.

Should the Klan decide to hold a meeting, during these hot days, it is feared that there must be close security measures taken and there might be need of National Guardsmen. It is to be remembered that the 1966 meet was visited by a group of Negroes, while others stood outside looking around. The 1966 meeting was held at the Memorial Auditorium, across the street from Shaw University and in the vicinity of one of the most crime blighted areas of the city.

Tactics Is Plan Of Abernathy

WASHINGTON - Economic boycotts in 40 cities across the nation are the next tactic planned by the Poor People's marchers in their campaign to win a better deal for poverty-stricken Americans.

That's the word from the Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy, jailed leader of the Poor People's campaign, who has started an "indefinite fast" in order to strengthen himself "for the fight ahead."

He told newsmen that he would consume only liquids and medicine that his body might need.

The economic boycotts are being planned in view of the Poor marchers' loss of their two concrete symbols -- Resurrection City and their mule train, both of which have been removed by police.

Loss of these symbols has made it harder for the marchers to find something to rally around.

The best they have been able to do is to direct their animosity against various federal departments and agencies -- which have, on the whole been lukewarm, but not antagonistic, to their demands.

Lacking symbols of their own and a monolithically evil enemy to confront, the marchers have almost had to arrange their arrests in order to dramatize the poor people's plight.

As this is not a satisfactory way to conduct a protest campaign (See ABERNATHY, P. 2)

Williams Wants To Be Back

DARES SALAAM, TANZANIA, Africa - Robert F. Williams, self-exiled militant leader, who fled this country in 1961, after going from country to country, says that the latent instincts of Monroe and the urge to put his feet on American soil, have created within him a craving for the little freedom he enjoyed here.

The deposed leader of the NAACP, who is said to have gone too far in his quest for freedom at any cost, has wandered almost aimlessly since he fled to Cuba, allegedly to avoid prosecution in a case where he is charged with kidnapping a white couple, while he was protesting in Monroe.

He is said to have made his intentions known in a cable to a representative of a Charlotte, television station.

According to persons who are said to have known the contents of the message, sent to America, there were some reservations. Williams is said to have inquired as to whether it was necessary to go to Monroe, from whence he fled, to get himself straight for entry in the United States and to regain his citizenship rights. He is alleged to have said that if it is necessary for him to go back to Monroe that officials are asking for a lot of trouble, which he felt they could avoid.

It was not disclosed whether the cable included what nature (See WILLIAMS, P. 2)

Relieved Of $65 In Chicks

Four youths, who decided that they wanted to get some money Friday night, soon found out that crime does not pay. They chose "Mr. Chick's," located at 305 E. Martin St. and Bobby Lee Phillips, 511 Hoke St., as the subject.

Due to their alleged exploits A. T. Wheelless, W. Lenoir St., John Harris, 19, W. Lenoir St. and Earl C. Glennard 17, also of W. Lenoir St. were arrested for the robbery of Phillips.

The police report shows that Phillips was in the eating place and three seemingly-friendly men came in and gathered around him and succeeded in removing his wallet, containing $65. They are said to have departed the scene, rather hastily, after taking the wallet. It so happened that Marshall Barnes, 313 E. Worth St., saw the men when they ran out.

Phillips related his experience to Officer R. Stewart and with the information and description furnished by persons, including Barnes, he began a search of the area and came upon the three men, whom he felt met the description given him. He arrested them and Phillips signed a warrant for larceny, against the three youths.

Convention Chairman Rules Hawkins Out-Of-Order

Governor Richard Hughes, New Jersey, gave Dr. R. A. Hawkins, now in the midst of one of the toughest political fights ever to happen in the ranks of Democratic politics, fostered by Negroes, intimidated here Monday that Hawkins had virtually lost the first round, in his battle to have 25% of the State's delegation, at the Chicago meeting allocated to Negroes.

The New Jersey governor is head of the 1968 powerful credentials committee and is reported as saying that Hawkins' demand for a quota would defeat its own purpose. The astute politician, considered one of the best in the business,

Negro Republicans

Let it be known that he believed such a move would fall on deaf ears, if it were presented in that wise. He intimated that Hawkins might have other recourse, but the argument thus far advanced was not evidence enough to show bad faith on the part of the State Democratic Convention.

Persons who have watched politics since the famous combination of Fumford Simmons, Lee S. Overmand and Josephus Daniels say that the statement of the New Jersey governor substantiates the argument projected by Hawkins in his un-

Education Stalling In State

The failure of many of the county school systems in North Carolina to comply with the desegregation edict of 1964 is putting many of them in a bad position with the U. S. Department of Health Education and Welfare. The failure of those affected systems to gear their program could prove a serious blow to the entire school system of the State.

The latest development has to do with the Greensboro City schools. The situation was so serious until the regional office of HEW decided that it would have to turn negotiations with the Greensboro officials over to higher authorities in Washington.

Sup. P. J. Weaver said Tuesday that he had received a letter dated June 27 to that effect and that he was told to correspond in the future with Dr. Lloyd Henderson of the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Washington civil rights office.

The Greensboro city school system maintains that it is in compliance with the Civil Rights Act on school desegregation. It has requested HEW to submit an alternate plan, which the department agreed to do, but has not done.

This action followed suits in Winston - Salem and Durham, where interested persons have gone to court and asked full compliance. There have been instances where funds have been tied up, due to non-compliance. The situation in Raleigh has long since said to have become incompatible with the edicts handed down from Washington.

The situation has become so alarming in Harnett County until the county board would not release the contents, pending its meeting Monday. It was the belief that the board was given a deadline to present a new plan to HEW, in Washington.

School authorities in Harnett have received a letter from the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare regarding integration of public schools in the county.

Plan To Stop Convention Grab

NEW YORK CITY - More than 175 Republican Negro leaders, from 18 states and the District of Columbia, meeting in a two-day session, at the Statler-Hilton Hotel, Friday and Saturday, vowed that the shades of the 1969 convention would not hover over the 1968 convention. The tempo of the meeting was set by Alexander Barnes, North Carolina, at the opening of a dinner meeting.

He told the diners that the delegates wore no man's collar and had come to New York to map a program that would tell the top echelon, of the GOP, that the few Negroes left in the party were going to have a hand in the affairs of the party.

It was apparent that all was not well within the ranks of some of the delegates, especially some of the New York representation. This matter was quickly settled when the Committee on Organization reported that there would be a one-state vote organization. The motion was carried and Thurman L. Dodson, former president of the National Bar Association and prominent Washington, D. C. attorney was elected chairman.

One of the first matters on the agenda was to reinforce the (See REPUBLICANS, P. 2)
