AXE WIELDER

Wilson went inside the house and produced the axe for the officers.

One officer on duty at the police desk told a CAROLINIAN newsman last Friday that one of the blows produced by the axe exposed a small portion of Mr. Rogers' brain.

The officers' report stated that both men "had been drinking heavily."

Both men had known each other at least fifteen years and the axe incident shocked many persons acquainted with them.

A check at Wake Memorial Hospital last Saturday afternoon and Tuesday of this week showed Rogers to be in "fair" condition.

Wilson is being held under a $500 bond in the Wake County Jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

He is scheduled to face City Court Judge Samuel Prellow Winborne on Monday, August 12, at 8:30 a. m. to hear his fate.

The woman drew eight months on the charge of engaging in prostitution. Like Williams, her sentence was suspended upon payment of $100 to the court and give Pillot his $125 back. There was no mention of the return of the $20 to Pillot for alleged value received. Police allege that when the woman was arrested she had $130 in her brassiere.

MAN THWARTED

The complainant said she thought it might have been the other lady at first, but when she discovered it was a man, she told him to "turn me loose, but he didn't." The woman said she attempted to get away, but couldn't, but was able to maneuver herself over to the light switch and cut the lights back on.

Mrs. Pierce said she believed her would-be-attacker to be Theodore Conway, who works in the housekeeping department at the hospital, but she couldn't be sure. Conway's address was not given and no further action was listed on the police report.

RAY'S SUDDEN

There are people who seek to indict themselves in the murder of celebrities in order to gain publicity or to "punish" themselves for something they feel pathologically guilty about.

Ray could be like that. Or something else might have dissuaded him from trying to delay or prevent his return to the United States by appealing his extradition all the way up to the British House of Lords. Ray's defense had been that he could not be extradited since Dr. King, whom he was accused of killing, was purportedly a "political figure."

The first court that heard that story didn't buy that, but appeals had been planned in London. Arthur Hanes, a Birmingham (Ala.) attorney, had gone to London to defend the suspect, and things seemed to be going Ray's way when he decided to return home.

Working in the suspect's favor was the fact that he was arrested in London while using the name of Sneyd. It remained for both British and U. S. officials to prove that Sneyd was Ray, and this was likely to make his extradition even more difficult.

Now, Ray's days in London are over, and his next challenge is defending him against local charges that he killed Dr. King.

The suspect likely did not return to this country except for some good reason. He probably has some startling, revealing, even shocking things to say when

Apartments, stores and cars were set afire and for two miles along both sides of Superior Avenue, a major thoroughfare, firemen braved sniper fire to fight fires ignited by Molotov cocktails.

Flames ranged from East 105th St., the area where the snipers were reportedly holed up, to the city limits, two miles away. The shooting lasted more than five hours Tuesday night and well into the morning hours of Wednesday. It subsided during a driving rainstorm, then erupted again at an intersection in the heart of a five-block area where the disturbance first broke out.

NEGRO MAYOR SEES PLOT Mayor Carl B. Stokes, the first Negro mayor in this city's history, believes the violence may have been planned. "There is a definable group involved, the mayor stated. "We've been running it down since yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon. We were trying to ascertain just what the fragments of information were."

According to police officials, the snipers were using at least one machine gun, automatic carbines, M1 rifles and shot-guns.

Although Mayor Stokes first requested that Governor James A. Rhodes keep National Guard troops from the area of violence to give the Negroes a chance "to see if they can control their community, he relented moments later and the troops invaded the city.

Mayor Stokes is the head of the nation's eighth largest city. His election last year, following a major riot in 1966 in the Hough section of Cleveland, had given rise to hopes that the city would be spared racial disturbances during his tenure.

According to witnesses, a group of five Negroes, about 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, armed with carbines and automatic rifles poured bullets into a police cruiser and a tow truck that pulled up to the intersection of Lakeview and Arbondale Aves. to pick up an abandoned car. Witnesses also said one of the five gunmen screamed, "We'll shoot anything that's white."

Mayor Stokes was under heavy police guard when he addressed a news conference at the peak of the disturbance. He

GI Facing Cumberland Murder Rap

FAYETTEVILLE - Police of this city feel that they have the guilty person, in the slaying of Willie Edward Harris, in his trailer here last week. Upon information furnished Greensboro police, Wayne Sherrell Penn, 17, whose address was listed as 2401 McConnell St., Greensboro, the suspect was arrested and brought back to Fayetteville and charged with the murder of Harris.

Penn, who also has given the name of Wayne Sherel Walker, was reported as being AWOL, from his post with the 320 Artillery, at Ft. Bragg. He is also charged with stealing Harris' 1964 automobile. Harris lived at 2012 Murchison Rd.

Police pieced their information together and came up with the belief that Penn beat Harris to death in the trailer, locked the door and then took his car. They were not able to establish a motive. Harris' body was found in the blood-splattered trailer when police found it necessary to break the door down, after Harris had not been seen for several days.

said, "I don't intend to permit this kind of lawlessness and violence to go unchecked in this community."

When Harris had not been seen for a number of days, curious neighbors became alarmed and notified police. When police decided to investigate, it was discovered that there was an odor coming from the trailer. This caused Officer Willie Farrtor to believe that Harris had gone away and left his dog locked in the house. When the officers did get into the house they found Harris' body in a bad state of decay. In order to really determine the cause of death, the body was sent to Cape Fear Valley Hospital, where an autopsy was to be held. It was believed that he died from loss of blood from a severe wound that he received on his shoulder.

Finding that Harris' car, a 1964 blue and white Buick, was not to be seen, a broadcast was sent out. It was not too long before Greensboro police had the suspect. The report of his arrest revealed that the youth was noticed going through a red light, in one of Greensboro's streets and was stopped for the traffic violation. It was then discovered that the car answered the description of Harris' car and license number DA-8678 was the second piece of evidence that pointed toward Penn's guilt.

Penn is now being held in the Cumberland County Jail, where he awaits a hearing, without the benefit of bail, on both charges.

Murder Of Kennedy Told In Magazine

The black man suffered another stunning loss in the murder of Senator Robert Francis Kennedy, SEPIA magazine says in an article in the August issue.

The story, written by a man who was on the scene, points out three shots were fired into Senator Kennedy instead of the two commonly supposed.

In a related story, the magazine points out the ridiculous ease with which the tools of murder may be purchased, this despite the murder of three prominent Americans in less than five years.

The weapons are already in the hands of Americans, thereby making virtually useless much of the new legislation in Congress, the story says.
