Todd was acting superintendent and Mrs. Odessa Todd gave the lesson review.

Why She Quit

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Mrs. Ruby Martin has explained why she quit her post as director of the office for civil rights in the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. She feared that President Nixon's debt to the South might force weakening of the school desegregation program. Mrs. Martin disclosed that the office was planning to investigate small Northern school systems for desegregation compliance, passing by larger Northern systems, regarded as too big to study adequately.
