The YWCA knows no barriers. It's devotion is to people - all people.

100 Young, Talented Musicians, To A&T U.

GREENSBORO - A special institute in music for high school and junior high school students will highlight the annual summer session at A&T State University.

More than 100 students from five states are expected to enroll in music classes from June 30 to August 2.

Now in its seventh season, the A&T institute has become one of the most successful of its kind for the training of young, talented musicians.

Each of the youngsters is given private instruction in either band instruments, piano, organ or voice. The institute also offers small classes and seminars in music theory, literature and appreciation.

Several times during the summer, the students and the institute faculty combine for recitals or staged musical productions.

The summer program also features several concerts by student bands, choirs and ensembles. Dr. Howard T. Pearsall, chairman of the A&T Music Department and Institute director, said that some new innovations, including programmed teaching may be tried during the institute this summer.

VSC To Host Conferences, Institutes

PETERSBURG - During the summer, Virginia State College will host 16 conferences, institutes and special projects in a variety of fields with almost 600 persons participating.

Dr. Jenkins Resigns At Albany State

ALBANY, Ga. - Dr. Thomas Miller Jenkins, II, president of Albany (Ga.) State College, announced his resignation as head of the South Georgia institution, effective as of August 31.

The announcement was officially made here in a prepared statement Thursday afternoon released concurrently with the announcement by the Board of Regents and the University System of Georgia that Dr. Jenkins, who has been president of Albany State College since July, 1965, will assume a new position working at Georgia State College and with the Board of Regents.

Jenkins, a 44-year old native of Hot Springs, Va., will serve as executive assistant to the president of Georgia State College and assigned by the Office of the Chancellor of the University System of Georgia the specific duty of developing the community college of Atlanta.

In announcing his resignation after four years in guiding the 66-year old institution through a period of enormous growth and tremendous expansion in the instructional program and the physical plant, Jenkins said, "It is with a deep sense regret that I announce my resignation. It can be said with absolute candor that I have never had a job which I have more thoroughly enjoyed. As a matter of fact, I do not believe that there is a more rewarding position in the United States of America."
