NEA Executive In Human Relations Named To Magazine Advisory Board

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Samuel B. Ethridge, assistant executive secretary for human relations of the National Association, has been named to the editorial advisory board of Integrated Education, a semi-monthly magazine dealing with the treatment of minorities in the public schools.

Ethridge, as director of NEA's Center of Human Relations, heads a nationwide program to help plan, develop, and promote activities related to the protection and advancement of civil and human rights of educators and students. More than 20 states have established human relations centers since the NCA center was organized a year ago.

Integrated Education, located in Chicago, publishes articles submitted by congressional leaders, educators, psychologists, and other professionals. The magazine also includes an up-to-date bibliography of books, magazine, and other publications concerning school integration and related topics.

Ethridge received his B. A. degree in 1957 from Howard University, Washington, D. C., and his M. A. degree in 1957 from the University of Cincinnati. A graduate of Stillman Junior's College, Tuscaloosa, Ala., he attended Alabama State College and Tuskegee Institute. He was recently honored by the District of Columbia Alumni Chapter of the Alabama State College as the "The Alabamian of the Year."

IBM Awards Computer To Holding Tech.

Robert LeMay, president, has announced that Holding Technical Institute has been awarded an IBM 1401 Computer System for instructional purposes. The International Business Machines, Inc. offered computer systems, to be placed through the Technical Educational Consortium, Inc. to qualified institutions, for the purpose of training technicians to meet the needs of today's computerized world. The course to be taught, a new "space-age" Electromechanical Technology, stresses service to an application of the computer, automated controls, and automated processes in business and industry. It will be offered for the first time in the capital area at Holding Tech, beginning in September.

In order to offer one of the most meaningful Electromechanical programs in the country, Holding Tech, an institutional member of the N. C. Community College System, sought and found the computer-age equipment necessary to inaugurate the program. A proposal, made to Technical Educational Consortium, Inc. resulted in Holding Tech being awarded one of the 25 IBM systems that were awarded to institutions throughout the U. S. Similar proposals were made to the Consortium by nearly 100 schools and the awarding of the computer equipment was made after a competitive evaluation of all the proposals.

The Consortium is an organization made up of technical education personnel and representatives of industry. The concept of a Consortium approach was the idea of Charles Bowen of IBM, who recognized that his company, like many others, needed technicians with uniform educational background in Electromechanical Technology who could be utilized equally well at any branch located throughout the world. Other companies agreed with Mr. Bowen, and the Consortium has developed a curriculum which provides a uniform approach to industries' needs. The curriculum is primarily oriented to application in the computer and business machine industries, but the principles are universal in nature. Graduates from initial test programs have been widely sought by companies not only in the computer and business equipment field, but also in aeronautics, automation and numerical control systems industries.

Yes, We All Talk

BY MARCUS H. BOULWARE
DIALECTAL ENGLISH
"CONTINUED"

Last week, I called attention to tendency to speak dialect in one sense of the word sets a person apart as inferior. In the racists' approach, Negroes have begun rejecting everything white, even good speech in some cases. Dr. Nick Aaron Ford of Morgan State College calls attention to "the exaggerated jargon invented especially to confuse and exasperate the whites."

He says that although Stoko-

New York Cited As Example

NEW YORK (NPD)—Violence—whether it's within the Black community or between Blacks and whites—continues to dominate the nation's news.

While some of the violence results from interracial tensions, a lot of it comes from disputes within the Black community.

An example of this latter form of violence was found in New York, where the reputed leader of a militant Black group was shot to death in a Harlem apartment building, six days after Charles 37X Kenyatta was shot.

According to police Clarence Smith Jowers, described as the leader of the "Five Percenters," was struck by seven or eight shots fired at him.

Jowers, 41, had been a member of the Black Muslims, but was expelled by the late Malcolm X, who himself split with the Muslims before being assassinated in 1965.

Kenyatta, organizer of the Harlem Mau Maus, was transferred from Fordham hospital in the Bronx to Manhattan's Bellevue hospital, apparently for his own safety, after being shot as he was getting out of his car in the Bronx.

Kenyatta, 49, told police he would be unable to identify the three Black men who fired seven shots at him at point-blank range. "I have many, many enemies," said Kenyatta, a former bodyguard for the late Malcolm X.

In Chicago, the county grand jury indicted 16 Illinois Black Panther party leaders and members for conspiracy, kidnaping, beating, torturing, and threatening to murder a man and a woman from suburban Summit.

According to Summit police, the victims were abducted at gunpoint on April 27 after the woman reportedly moved and hid a riot gun and other weapons entrusted to her by party members.

At the same time, an all-white jury in Chicago found Frederick "Doug" Andrews, organizer of the Westside Community Organization, and four others not guilty on all charges of conspiracy to commit arson during the riots that followed the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., last year.

The other defendants were Edward "Fats" Crawford, 47, Curlee Reed, 21, Clarence Bell, 23, and Andrew Peden, 20.

Also in Chicago, seven members of three street gangs were named in three county grand jury indictments in connection with recent shootings.

Four members of the East Side Disciples were charged with murdering a rival gang member and wounding another. Two members of the War Lords were charged with attempted murder of three Blackstone Rangers and aggravated battery of three girls. And a member of the Cobra Stones street gang was indicted on charges of attempted murder and armed violence in a shooting incident at Du Sable High school.

Meanwhile, interracial violence was also taking its toll. In Cairo, Ill., the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, national director of SCLC's Operation Breadbasket, charged that armed whites are on the offensive in the city "against insecure, frightened, and almost defenseless Blacks."

"A state of murderous terror prevails" in Cairo, said Rev. Jackson, who went to Cairo in response to the increasing violence in the southern Illinois river town.

In Evanston, a suburb of Chicago, a 12-member hearing board opened a civil-rights investigation into the shooting of a 19-year-old Black burglary suspect by a white Evanston policeman.

The youth, Bruce Williams of Chicago, was hit in the head and blinded.

The Evanston Human Relations commission requested the hearing after 40 representatives of Black organization said they believed the shooting was covered up by city officials.

ly Carmichael, Rap Brown, and LeRoi Jones peddle this dialectal nonsense, in their own speech and writing they use impacable standard English. I agree with Dr. Ford that black students not only can learn to master standard English as a primary language but the majority wants to do so.

It is the duty of teachers of English to help Black students to gain proficiency in using the speech of the majority of the best educated speakers.

Shaw University To Conduct Community-Citizenship Class

Through a series of free and informal workshops, classes and seminars in citizenship education, Shaw University will inform low-income residences of the Raleigh community behavior patterns and mechanisms used to successfully achieve individual aims, goals and objectives.

This will be the first of six such workshops utilizing a matching fund grant of $21,000 from the Office of Economic Opportunity (OEO). The Extension Education Department of the University will sponsor classes from July 1, through September 1 which will focus on problem areas of government, health, economic and community development, with emphasis on Consumer Education, Housing and other services available to the community.

According to William Fiddick, Director of Extension Education, the classes will be "small, friendly and informal."

"We intend to treat the citizens as a political individual, a consumer, an aware parent and a tenant with the intention of acquainting less fortunate citizens with the behavioral patterns and rights as well as obligations of an involved citizen."

Riddick said, "It's surprising to some that there are Raleigh citizens who don't know how to go about having rental property in which they live painted or repaired."

He said, "In addition, many are unaware of the responsibilities that belong to the tenant or what city regulations can be enforced."

Classes will be held in the Science Hall two nights each week, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Each class session will last from 1 1/2 to 2 hours.

Mr. Ira Mitchell, who will be in charge of the program, said that, "We intend for those who attend to learn by participating." She said that codes and ordinances would be present and explained in straight classroom sessions. Role playing sessions, with participants playing the roles of landlord, tenant, city officials, etc., will supplement classroom sessions. Workshops will be used in consumer education courses with participants actually shopping and implementing information they learn.

No testing or grading will be done and free transportation will be provided if needed. Those citizens interested should call Mrs. Ira Mitchell at 828-9504 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. Monday through Friday.
