'Let's Stop Asking For Hamburgers When There's Steak,' Clerics Told

BOSTON, Mass. "Let's stop asking for hamburgers," exalted a black minister, "when there's steak in the refrigerator, and hogs in the backyard. We've been slopping the hogs too long."

After days of fuming, fretting and fussing over the "outrageous" demands of "those smarter" black churchmen that they be treated like men and given equity decision-making power in the United Church of Christ, the denomination's Seventh General Synod meeting here, June 25 to July 2:

* Upgraded to a Commission the 6-year-old Committee for Racial Justice, headed by the Rev. Charles E. Cobb, New York, gave it a minimum guaranteed budget of $500,000 for 1970, and $600,000 the following year. Additional funds from special yearly offerings could give this social action unit a yearly operating budget of $1-million. The Commission's budget will become part of the regular United Church of Christ 1972 budget. Earlier, the group defeated a move to give the Commission a guaranteed budget of $1,000,000, plus revenue from the special offerings.

* Approved that the United Church of Christ Ministers for Racial and Social Justice, a predominantly black group, recommend black persons to participate in decision-making process for determining the use of the capital and investment funds in the church's boards and instrumentalities.

* Called for restructuring the American Missionary Association, which relates the church to six black colleges in the South, to provide for "predominant black representation and supervision," and making provisions for a black executive director. With a yearly income of $1-million, the AMA directs two-thirds of its money to these colleges.

* Requested a feasibility study for "establishing and supporting financially a black university in the South."

* Commended church boards and instrumentalities (church-type corporations) to deposit "a portion of funds in black financial institutions."

* Commended that the predominantly black Ministers for Racial and Social Justice select persons "to evaluate relationships existing between missions in the African people."

* Commended the principle of establishment of black publishing and printing industries and requested the Board for Homeland Ministries' Division of Publication "to explore feasibility of cooperating with other communions in the establishment of such industries."

* Resolved that a study be made for the establishment of a Southern Land Bank for the underwriting of cooperative farms.

* Requested the denomination's Office of Communication to make a feasibility study of a

Wives Of Solons Live 'On A Welfare Budget'

WASHINGTON, D. C. - At a meeting last week, called by the National Welfare Rights Organization, a group of Congressional wives related the horror of their experiences in "Live On A Welfare Budget" week. Along with hundreds of middle-class families across the country, Congressional wives were asked to live on a welfare budget for a week to increase their awareness of the inadequacy of welfare programs and the hunger that inadequate programs produce.

The "Live On A Welfare Budget" week action, in which approximately a dozen congressional families participated, was spearheaded by the wives of Sen. Fred Harris, and Sen. Walter Mondale. The wife of Sen. Phillip Hart is Honorary National Chairman of the project.

NWRO's basic demand is for a Guaranteed Adequate Income - money instead of patchwork food programs. Until everyone is guaranteed $500 (for a family of four) all families should be given free food stamps to make up the difference between what they are allowed by the welfare department to spend for food and $2237 (the minimum needed to live for a family

Misuse Of Power Is Criticized

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The maldistribution of power in modern society - who has it and who does not, who should have it and why," was cited last Thursday by William H. Brown III, Chairman of the U. S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission as the one central conflict "at the bottom of every significant domestic problem contributing to the turmoil inside America today."

Speaking at the traditional "Youth Night" meeting of the 60th Annual Convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, held last week in Jackson, Miss., Brown listed, as some of the most visible illustrations the issues of school decentralization, disruption of the universities, and police brutality; he pointed out that employment discrimination is another, equally crucial, example of power misused or abused. "The burden of social responsibility, rests more heavily upon the business interests than upon any other component of our society," Brown stated.

"The power has always been recognized and accepted by business; the responsibility has not. When the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission can receive in a single fiscal year (1968) over 15,000 individual complaints of discriminatory employment practices - practices which affect many more thousands of persons besides the charging parties - we know that the responsibility has not been accepted."

WASHINGTON, D.C. - A score or more racially-mixed civil rights workers under the leadership of Catholic Priest Father James Groppi of Milwaukee, Wis., attending the 60th Annual NAACP Convention, walked into the Jackson City Council during the last meeting of the administration of Mayor Allen C. Thompson and created quite a stir by asking of the retiring mayor, "are you or are you not a white separatist, and what have you done for the black people of the community?"

Groppi demanded a yes or no answer, but the mayor said he would answer "in due time."

Later, after other matters were handled, a Negro member of the party - Alex Waites, executive secretary of the Miss. NAACP Conference - reportedly told the mayor: "The outgoing city government, as far as Negroes are concerned, has rendered a disservice to the black community and we are glad you are going." Waites promised to have a group on hand when the new mayor and Council is sworn in July 8th.

Reactions Of Blacks Are Noted

BY ROLAND BLACK
WASHINGTON (NPD) - The Nixon administration isn't making trends in Black community, where the President is being accused of "selling out to the South" - three recent government actions have drawn fire: -The administration's efforts to replace the 1965 Voting Rights act with a law applying not just to the South. -The administration's decision to abolish the September School desegregation deadline facing about 700 Southern school districts. -The administration's efforts to get the suitax extended by wooing Southern support.

In each case, Nixon is said to be making his move, either to curry favor with the South, or to pay political debts to white Southerners who put him over the top in recent Presidential elections.

According to Clarence Mitchell, Washington bureau director for the NAACP, the Nixon administration "is trying to scuttle the Voting Rights act" in a political effort to strengthen the Republican party in the South.

"They are trying to pick up anti-Negro votes," he added.

The Nixon administration wants to do away with the 1965 Voting Rights act, applicable only in Southern states with a history of racial discrimination in voting, and to
