Social Security News

Many young people don't realize the protection they have under social security according to R. A. Flynn, District Manager for Social Security. "They continue to think about social security as being a program for older people involving retirement and Medicare. This is far from being the complete story," he said. He pointed out that social security provides disability payments to disabled workers and their families, and to widowed mothers and their children. To illustrate the protection social security provides a young family, Mr. Flynn gave the following examples: A young father of two small children, both under age 5, is disabled in an accident. His average earnings covered by social security were $450.00 a month. His family could receive about $354.00 each month, or $4,250 each year, in social security payments. By the time the youngest child reaches 18, this family could have received more than $55,000. Payments to the wife would be stopped, but they would be continued to the disabled worker. Later when the wife reaches age 62, payments would be resumed for her. Mr. Flynn invites anyone who would like more information about social security to call or visit the office at 1122 Hillsborough Street, Raleigh, N. C.

They are open from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 8:30 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. on Friday. Homes financed through the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) and Veterans Administration (VA) accounted for nearly three-fifths of all homes that sold for less than $15,000 in the first quarter of 1969.
