Others Are Adopting Tactics

OAKLAND, Calif. - (NPI) - Founded three years ago, the Black Panther party, despite its troubles with the law or maybe because of the law, is exerting an increasingly mighty impact on the Black community.

The Panthers' militancy is credited with influencing other Black groups to move toward Panther-like activism.

One of the groups is the NAACP, whose executive director, Roy Wilkins, has said he wants to meet with Panther Chairman Bobby Seale to explore possible agreement and unity.

Panther leaders "appear to be articulate men of skill in appraising the present situation," Wilkins said.

Meanwhile, the National Urban League has shifted from persuasion to confrontation in some programs, according to Whitney M. Young Jr., the league's executive director.

While there is no announced link between the league's new stance and Panther influence, the two appear to be indirectly related.

Many of the Panther leaders have gotten into trouble with (See PANTHERS, P. 2)

Durham To Host Talks On Freedom

DURHAM - About 30 representatives of the North Carolina Young Americans for Freedom will attend the 1969 North Carolina Freedom Offensive Leadership Conference in Durham, starting September 13.

A comprehensive plan to quell the disruptive activities of the 'New Left' on North Carolina campuses this fall will be discussed and formulated at the leadership conference.

At the conference in Durham, national leaders of Young Americans for Freedom will disclose to North Carolina members "The YAF Legal Response to 'New Left'."

The plan calls for breach of contract suits to be filed against the administration of any college that closes down because of 'New Left' activities, and breach of civil rights suits against any 'New Left' organization which impedes attendance at classes.

Attempt To Kill Evers Thwarted

PAYETTE, Miss. - Mayor Charles Evers, the first Black man ever to head a southern town, revealed Tuesday night that local police broke up an attempt by three white men to kill him outside a store in a shopping center here. Evers, whose brother Medgar was slain by a sniper in Jackson in 1963, said one of the men had been arrested.

Police said that they were holding Dale Walton, about 29, of Tupelo, on a charge of speeding and carrying a concealed weapon. Evers said police found five weapons in Walton's car. "It really isn't that big a thing," he said. "We knew these men had said they were going to kill me. I'm not hurt and there weren't even any shots fired."

Evers said he was in his store when neighbors began calling to warn him a car containing three white men was continually circling the building. Evers said he called police. "When I walked out of the store, my daughter said 'Daddy, look' and jumped in front of me, but the police got him (Walton) before he could do anything."

WEATHER REPORT

Temperatures during the period Thursday through Monday, will average below normal. Daytime highs will be in the 70s, except the low 80s along the south coast. Lows at night will average in the upper 40s and low 50s in North Carolina ranging to the middle 60s along the coast. Mild days and cool nights are expected with a slight warming trend at the beginning of the weekend, turning cooler around Sunday. Precipitation is expected to average one-tenth of an inch or less, occurring as widely scattered showers on Saturday.

Federal Cash Involved In Bldg. Construction

CHICAGO - (NPI) - The federal government has stepped into the dispute over job opportunities for Black people in the building trades unions.

Uncle Sam is particularly interested in the dispute because federal money is involved in many construction jobs where few Black people are employed.

And there is an indication that the clashes between Black protesters and white workers in Chicago, Pittsburgh, and other cities may soon be over, as a result of federal intervention. Samuel J. Simmons, assistant (See JOBS DISPUTE, P. 2)

BEATEN BY TWO

Henry Davis, Jr., address unlisted, told Officer Lindsay W. Godwin at 4:45 a.m. Sunday that he was at the corner of S. Blount and E. Cabarrus Streets when he was accosted by three colored males. It was further brought out that Davis was crossing the street at the time. He said a "boy wearing a blue shirt was the one that hit me first." He said another of the boys told the one in the blue shirt not to kick him, but Davis was reportedly kicked by another person. After an investigation, Godwin arrested Richard Frazier, 23, 15 Dodd Street, and charged him with a assault. Davis suffered bruises on the left side of the head, and eye and chest injuries. The other two suspects escaped.
