TSU Planning New Program Of Extension

NASHVILLE - A major new Department of Extension and Continuing Education has been established at Tennessee State which is a part of the re-organization of the University set by President A. P. Torrence. Dr. James E. Farrell, an alumnus of the University and former administrator-adviser of a joint undertaking by the United States Government, the Liberian Government, and Tuskegee Institute, returned from African last month to accept appointment by President Torrence to head the new department.

Dr. Ozie L. Adams, who has conducted the extension program in the School of Agriculture and Home Economics of the University, is now working in the framework of the new department.

Dr. Farrell says that the department is upgrading the extension services of the University in every facet of its academic program in Nashville and other urban areas of Tennessee. Said he, "the continuing education phase of the program is planned to meet the needs of those persons not now enrolled in college."

The 1969 Harlem Cultural Festival in New York City, a series of six free, outdoor concerts featuring top black talent, resulted in a Business and the Arts Award presented by the New York Board of Trade. The Board, which makes several such awards each year, acknowledged the role business played in making the festival possible by presenting an award to the Maxwell House Division of General Foods Corporation, which sponsored the festival and a television program based on it.
