JONES MANGUM LARUE WATKINS NICHOLS
Inflation has almost become a way of life for the average citizen. The price of a good is higher than the value of the good nowadays. That is, you can no longer get a dime's worth of cookies for a dime. You now have to pay 14 to 15 cents for a dime's worth of cookies.

The CAROLINIAN wanted to know how its readers viewed their ability to make enough money to pay for the things they wanted. So, this week THE CAROLINIAN asked its readers, "Do you think it is easier to make a living today, than say five years ago?"

GARRIETT C. JONES: No. I don't think so. The cost of living is at an all time high. The cost of food, clothing and other commodities is outpricing wages.
FRANK L. WATKINS: I don't know. But, I wish something could be done to control the rising price of living.
ALPHONSO LARUE: As far as taxation is concerned, No. We make more (money), but we keep less. Taxes five years ago were not as high as they are now.

THOMAS YATES: Well, there Street, informed Officer Joseph Blaylock at 8:35 p.m. on Monday, that while walking home from work on S. McDowell Street, between Cabarrus and W. Davie, two colored males came up from behind and kicked him down, then said, "Let's have it all." He said they reached into his wallet, valued at $3, plus the $80 it contained.

Mrs. Emma Blue, 40, 1415 Hudson Avenue, told Officer R. B. Tant at 3:54 p.m. Saturday, that she was visiting her daughter when her daughter's husband, Cornelius Williams, 47, 17 S. Swain Street, "got up out of the bed and started arguing with me. He then took out his knife and held it at my chest and told me he was going to kill me." She said Williams then left the room and she called "the law". Her dress was torn and damage was set at $2. Her slip received the same amount of damage. She said she would sign an assault with a deadly weapon warrant against her son-in-law.
