

Shaw's Educational Facilities Charrette Is Announced By Steering Committee

The Steering Committee of Shaw University's Educational Facilities Charrette announced Friday, Oct. 24, that the old Sanders' Motor Company Building, S. Blount Street, will function as a meeting place for participants in its Educational Facilities Charrette November 3.

Steering Committee Chairman Atty. J. Melville Broughton, Jr., made the announcement of the site located at 329 South Blount Street for the nine-day session. Broughton stated, "It (the proposed site) is conveniently situated for citizens living in Southside Raleigh and for those without personalized transportation."

During a recently held "breakfast" with members of the planning session of the Charrette, Romallus C. Murphy, Charrette Coordinator, stressed the need for full participation of residents from a cross-section of Raleigh's population so that the results from the Charrette will reflect the thinking of the community as a whole.

In its new role as an urban university, Shaw, under the leadership of President King V. Cheek, is attempting through its Charrettes to make its new thrust felt. The Charrette is designed to facilitate the physical and student body building aims of Shaw's long-range expansion master plan. Also, Shaw hopes to aid in the inner-city building by providing better methods for improving the quality of urban living.

In a statement taken from Shaw's "Charrette Concept Paper," some of the university's goals were laid down: As a proposed recipient of land in the urban renewal area, Shaw University as an educational institution and corporate citizen, recognizes its need to assist in providing housing for citizens displaced, maximize the availability of its facilities for community use, develop programs and projects related to the immediate community and contemporary society, thus benefiting the total community, and lend its resources, talents and energies to improving the social condition of people and the development of physical surroundings under circumstances compatible with healthy urban living.

As a whole, the structure of the Charrette will be centered upon the above objectives.

When the planning session of the Educational Facilities Charrette convenes, WSHA (student-run FM radio station of Shaw University) will have a direct line to the project. It will be an attempt toward both on the spot coverage and summations and linkage to telephone calls from area citizens who are unable to make personal appearances.

Urban renewal is on the minds of the voters and all of the local politicians with the proposed bond issue pending. The voters will determine if a major urban renewal project will get the necessary funds on election day, November 4th. In this interest, The CAROLINIAN went to its readers to see what types of opinions they had of the present housing situation in Raleigh. Our question for this week is "What do you think of the housing situation here in Raleigh?"

JACK PRICE: Bad. All of the houses with rats, garbage, no water and all that, need to be condemned. The new homes being built to replace some that have already been condemned are very nice. But, the city still needs to build more houses.

MRS. ELOISE HEIGHT: Too much rent is charged for little houses. You don't have much money left to pay your other bills.

MRS. MAE WATSON: Well, it couldn't be any worse. People cannot live in some of the houses that I have seen. There is nowhere else they can go, so they stay in the slum areas.

R. MCCOY: It's just a shame. The city knows how bad housing is in Southside, but they don't do nothing. Yet, the people who own the shacks there go on collecting the rent.

THOMAS REID: The new communities that are being built for low income families will help a great deal to make Raleigh a better place to live in.

MRS. IDA GLOVER: I have lived in some pretty bad apartments since I have been in Raleigh and I think there has been some improvement. Rich and Apollo Heights are nice places where we can go to live now.

CHARLES KING: Many houses in Raleigh need to be torn down right now. It's disgraceful that we have to live in them because there is no place to go. Maybe urban renewal will help do away with our slums.

WILLIE STEPHENSON: My family has had to pay high rent for sub-standard housing. To me, Raleigh is very poor in housing available to low income people. All of us need decent homes for our kids.

MRS. CAROL GOODSON: Awful. You have never seen such a sight as the houses some of us are forced to live in. I think that the landlords should be brought to trial for committing a crime against the people who rent from them.

BILL TOMBLIN: My neighborhood is a disaster area. Nothing there is fit to live in. I am afraid for my children's safety.

attend the Eighteenth Annual Conference of the South Eastern Regional Association for Student Teaching, which will be held at the Admiral Semmes Hotel, Mobile, Alabama from October 30, through November 1. The theme is, "An Ideal Program of Professional Laboratory Experiences."

The speaker for the opening session is Dr. Curtis Nash, president, National Association for Student Teaching. His topic will be "Professional Laboratory Experiences for a Real World." The members of the conference will be divided into 32 small groups with leaders and recorders, who will discuss the theme.

PLANNING SESSION BREAKFAST—Members of the Planning Session of Shaw University's recently launched Educational Facilities Charrette listen to Shaw president King V. Cheek (standing) as he addresses them during the breakfast at which members learned of recent developments. Announcements were made that the workshop phase of the Planning Session will be held on November 3, at the old Sanders' Motor Company property, S. Blount Street. (See story).

Debaters At Shaw U. In 1st Tourney

Shaw University's debating team attended its first tournament recently at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The tournament consisted of 18 schools represented by 30 teams. All participants debated both sides of the resolution that the federal government should grant annually a specific percentage of its income tax revenue to the states. Each team debated three rounds of each side of the topic.

Shaw University was represented by two teams consisting of Willie Brooks of Clinton; and Howard Sims of Plainfield, New Jersey; Hazel Mack of Winston-Salem; and Milton Lee of Ahoskie. Sims and Brooks won four of six rounds by defeating Davidson College, the University of West Virginia, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the University of Richmond. Their only defeats came at the hands of the University of Florida and the University of Georgia.

participating in their first debate, won their first tournament by capturing one of six rounds, defeating Fairmont state.

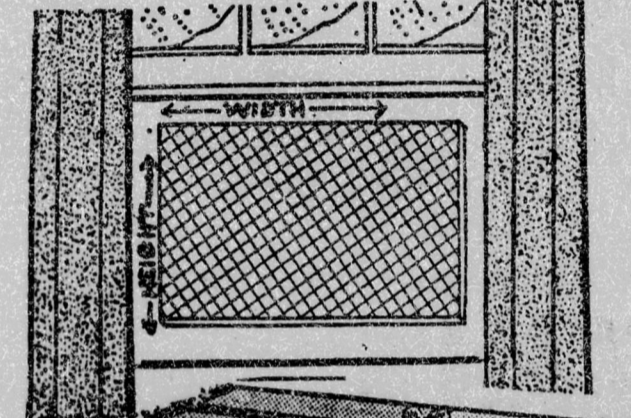

David Landsburg, Director of Forensics at Shaw, obviously pleased with the results, stated that the participants along with other students in the Shaw Forensics Union had worked diligently to prepare themselves for the initial tournament.

The week-end of October 31, 1968, the Shaw debaters will participate in tournaments at Wake Forest University and Appalachian State University.
