White Defendant Released On Bond, But Marshall Barnes Still Held For Kidnap, Rape

"I Was On My Way Back To New Jersey"-Woman

Although a 44-year-old white man, arrested and charged with him on kidnap and rape charges was released on $5,000 bond last Thursday, Marshall Barnes, 36, 313 E. Worth Street, was still being held in Wake County Jail without bond on Wednesday of this week.

MARSHALL BARNES

Barnes, and Huey Burke Hicks, a brick masonry contractor, were charged by Miss Ada Jean Fowler, 25, formerly of Raleigh, now living in Newark, N. J., with kidnaping and raping her on Monday of last week. Scene of the alleged rape had not been revealed at CAROLINIAN press time.

According to information received by this newspaper, Miss Lois Faye Fowler, Route 2, Wake Forest, sister of the complainant, called the investigative division of the Raleigh Police Department at 10:25 p.m. last Monday and spoke to Lt. R. A. Liles.

Miss Lois Fowler told the officer that her sister left home to catch the 6:15 bus back to New Jersey and that she met a man at the bus station that wanted someone to drive a tractor

Former State Bishop Calls Self 'Accident'

NEW YORK, N. Y. - Why would a man with 30 years of experience in the Episcopal Church, including 11 years as the Sixth Bishop of Montana, call himself an "ecclesiastical accident"? Why would he write a novel laying bare the philosophical earthquakes that are creating deep chasms within the Church's hierarchy? Why would he admit the great personal turmoil faced by many church members is even more anguishing than commonly thought?

The man is Chandler W. Sterling and he is the first bishop ever to write a novel; THE HOLROYD PAPERS published by Bartholomew House Ltd.

Believing strongly (too strongly to suit some of his colleagues) that the Church must don its 7-league boots and stride into the 20th century, Chandler Sterling has spent his life in the Church talking with the high and the low and he has written his novel to spur the Church into relating to today's world and to today's people. Relinquishing his bishop's post because he could not accept the philosophy behind his tenure that would lead him into a do-nothing position and because he could not accept his income from congregations whose values were at a variance with his own, Chandler Sterling (who, even though he has resigned, retains a seat and voice in the House of Bishops) took a position assisting with church confirmation in Philadelphia. The spare time he found he utilized to write THE HOLROYD PAPERS.

Earl Warren To Receive NUL Honor

NEW YORK, N. Y. - The National Urgan League will honor former Chief Justice Earl Warren for "great and historic" contributions to the cause of human rights at the League's annual Equal Opportunity Day dinner.

The retired Chief Justice will receive the organization's 1969 Equal Opportunity Day Award for advancing the civil rights movement through the Supreme Court's landmark decisions on school desegregation, voting, reapportionment, the rights of defendants, and other historic rulings.

Mr. Warren, who stepped down from the bench this past summer after 16 eventful years as Chief Justice, will receive the award from James A. Linen, National Urgan League President, at the dinner on November 19. The dinner will be held in the Grand Ballroom of the New York Hilton Hotel.

At the same time, the League will present a special achievement award to Maurice W. Lee, Sr., of Foley, Oklahoma. Mr. Lee is a black businessman who almost singlehandedly salvaged the economy of the all-Negro town of Foley.

Mr. Lee created a new industry (See EARL WARREN, P. 2)

Churchmen Plan Third Convocation

NEW YORK - The National Committee of Black Churchmen, Inc. (NCBC) will hold its Third Annual Convocation at the Claremont Hotel, Berkeley, California, November 11-14.

More than 500 black churchmen from throughout the nation are expected in Oakland to consider where the black church is going. According to the NCBC Newsletter, the black church "is going to meet its Lord in urban ghettos and rural slums of America, on the college campus, in jails and narcotic clinics, among the developing nation of Africa—wherever people of color struggle for identity, pride, and power."

High on the agenda for the three day meeting will be a (See CHURCHMEN, P. 10)

Racial Conflict Less Violent, But Still Exists, Center Finds

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Racial conflict in the South is less violent and less visible than it was a few years ago, but it still exists, and an examination of recent strife in two Southern towns reveals more contrasts than similarities with the past.

That is the gist of a report

BEATEN BY FIVE

Nathaniel McCuller, Jr., Route 1, Holly Springs, told Officers K. J. Johnson and E. P. Nagle at 11:11 p.m. Saturday, that he and his friend, Henry McNair, were leaving Burnett's Sweet Shop on W. South Street, headed to their car when approximately five colored males jumped them. McCuller said that they hit them with their hands and feet when they were on the ground. McCuller and McNair finally got away and called "the law." Neither man knows which way the suspect's went, nor could either identify any of the attackers.

WIFE STABS HUSBY

Excell Wilson, 34, 211 Seawell Avenue, informed Officer G. W. Abernathy at 3:12 a.m. Saturday, that he was at work when a neighbor called him to come home because his wife was drinking and disturbing all of the neighbors. Wilson stated that when he arrived, he began to argue with his wife. A fight ensued and his wife, Mrs. Margaret Davis Ballentine Wilson, 30, picked up a knife from the table. As Wilson turned to leave the room, she reportedly stabbed him in the back. He was carried to Wake Memorial Hospital and treated for the wound in the lower portion of his back. Mrs. Wilson was "hauled off" to Wake County Jail and booked on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

income is low and agriculture economy still predominates. Negro protests in both places have taken the form of boycotts, and the philosophy of non-violence has characterized the picketing, marches and demonstrations, as was true during the height of the civil rights movement in the South earlier in this decade. White resistance to the protests also bears some resemblance to the past, being marked on occasion by violence in both communities.

But the conflicts differ from those of earlier years in several important respects, the report says, and it cites these examples:

The issues are different. Before, they centered on the law; now, they appear to be (See LESS VIOLENT, P. 2)

Selective Buying In Orange Co.

HILLSBOROUGH - The Orange County Voters League (OCVL) continues to sanction a selective buying campaign in Hillsborough. In a recent communique, the OCVL stated that black residents of Orange County were requested to continue with the selective buying program directed against Sis's Shoe Store, Carr's Supermarket, Super Dollar, Smith's Furniture Co., Den's Quikie Mart and all downtown gas stations. The selective buying drive has been in effect for the past six (6) months. The OCVL announced that until merchants (See BOYCOTTING, P. 6)

Malcolm X U. Defended By H. Fuller

Howard Fuller, founder and head, of Malcolm X Liberation University in Durham denied charges that his institution was geared toward Communism or Communist teachings. Appearing as a participant in the Episcopal Forum which is sponsored by three Raleigh Episcopal churches Sunday night (The Good Shepherd, St. Mark's and St. Ambrose), the school head stated "I don't see how (Malcolm X University) could further the cause of Communism. I just don't understand it. People think that they (Communists) can move in and take over anything." "No. We are not Communists," Fuller remarked.

Many members of the Episcopal Diocese in North Carolina have sharply criticized a grant received by Malcolm X University from the national office of the Episcopal Church in recent weeks. The $45,000 grant to the school was subsequently endorsed by a committee of the local diocese representing 39 North Carolina counties, however.

In response to repeated questions of whether or not the University was non-violent or violent prone, Fuller noted "If you're going to require us to be non-violent, then you'll have to require your people to be non-violent." "But," continued the outspoken leader, "we do not (See H. FULLER, P. 5)

Girl Scout Board Sets National Minority Meet

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The National Board of Directors of Girl Scouts of the U. S. A. has voted unanimously to support a request of its black board members for an early meeting of minority group members of the board and staff with representatives of minority membership throughout the movement.

Purpose of the meeting authorized by the National Board will be to develop action plans to make the Girl Scout program more responsive to minority group needs and to help break down the walls of prejudice and misunderstanding among all girls.

Black members who were present at the board meeting held on October 23, immediately following the organization's triennial convention in Seattle were: Dr. Dorothy Ferabee, Washington, D. C.; Miss Minnie (See GIRL SCOUT, P. 6)
