Band Echoes

to your host, (a band member or mascot).

One major parade stands before the J. W. Ligon High School band: The Christmas parade on November 24 will end the marching season. Preparations are now underway to begin our concert season. It can be seen that band activities never end actually. The music department attempts to offer a year-round program in conjunction with regular school activities. Music performed during the season is selected from a standard list published annually in the interest of high school bands. From this same list in drawn the music performed at the different local and state band festivals. The music is varied and we hope interesting for the musicians as well as the audience. On the contest level, the music is graded so that a director can choose the best place for his band to play.

As always, there is the problem of finance for these trips and dues to pay for participation. This sum is usually raised with the help of the community. The J. W. Ligon Band Boosters Club is foremost in the several projects that have been presented in the past. The project this year is a "Stay At Home Tea." People desiring to aid may do so by honoring the invitation to have a cup of tea at their own homes.

At the same time, nominations will be accepted for a "Little Blue Band Prince and Princess." They will reign over all band activities during 1970. The deadline for the tea and a reception for band parents and friends will be December 17th. Watch for the time and place. The children will range in age from infants to age six. Indicate your choice on the invitation and return
