Urges Youth To Enter Banking

A new motion picture to encourage black youths to consider banking as a career has been produced in Detroit and is believed to be the first of its type.
The film, produced by the International Afro-American Museum, in cooperation with the National Bank of Detroit, is called "The Bank Is Open to You."
The 15-minute color film will be distributed nationally by the International Afro-American Museum. It is designed for schools, community organizations, churches, and other groups interested in career development.
The film originated from an idea of Dr. Charles Wright, president of the International Afro-American Museum, and Dr. Charles F. Whitten, director of the museum's career films.

VISITING SCHOLAR AT SAINT AUGUSTINE'S COLLEGE—Center: Dr. Urban T. Holmes, visiting scholar of Eastern North Carolina Colleges. The University of North Carolina professor led a seminar at Saint Augustine's College which dealt specifically with linguistics and areas of mediaeval literature. The discussions took place November 17, with French and English majors participating.

STUDENT PRESENTS CORSAGE—Miss Ethel Brunson, sophomore French and English major of Dudley presents corsage of Mrs. Urban T. Holmes, wife of the visiting scholar who led the seminar at Saint Augustine's College on November 17.

Last Rites Held For James T. Diggs, 80

WINSTON-SALEM—The funeral of James T. Diggs, Sr., 80, of Winston-Salem, was held Monday in Rives Memorial Auditorium of the Winston-Salem State University, Novem-Salem State University, Mr. Diggs died Saturday, November 8.
Mr. Diggs received many honors and had an illustrious career. He was an engineer, architect, contractor, craftsman, builder and consultant to major firms throughout the country. He has also been a school teacher. His education was received at the Slater State Normal and Industrial Institute, now Winston-Salem State University, and he spent two years at Fisk University. He was an ordained minister, and a member of the Union Mission Holy Church which his father founded.
In 1968, he was honored as "Deputy of the Year" by the United Supreme Council of 33rd-degree Masons, Prince Hall Affiliation at their convention held in San Diego, California.

Urges Youth To Enter Banking

Dr. Wright comments that, "both Dr. Whitten and I know that there is an extensive body of literature and films on career opportunities. But despite this fact, little of it has clearly addressed itself to young blacks in a relevant manner."
"In the past, many black youngsters have viewed career information literature with skepticism because it did not seem to apply to them. Now they can actually see that black men can reach high posts in medicine or in a major bank. This affects their own drive to reach high life goals."
"The Bank Is Open to You" was filmed entirely in Detroit. Although the central professional persons in the film are employed at National Bank of Detroit, the motion picture does not identify the bank.

Navy Steers A Black Man To Big Success

He is a 35-year-old black man who owns a split-level house in Boston. He is married and has three children. He has a college degree and now earns $14,000 a year as a salesman. Herbert Simmons is his name and he has it made.
Plenty of black men have made it, but Simmons' path to success is unique.
He was poor as a young boy in the Roxbury district of his hometown of Boston, Mass. He did not do very well in high school, and due to lack of ambition, he dropped out of pharmacy school.

Simmons says of his past that he was just average. "The best I thought I could do in life was to be an ordinary day-laborer," remarked Simmons, adding, "And be a part of the lower-middle class society."
Simmons had no great hopes about his future; he did not expect to receive more than anyone else and wanted to be average.
Then came the Navy.

HERBERT SIMMONS

It took four years of military service to change Simmons' way of thinking, expand his intuition, and widen his goals for a more prosperous ambition. The change in Simmons' life came unexpectedly.
At the outbreak of the Korean conflict, Simmons thought that it was typical for the average person to enlist in the military service rather than to be drafted. So in 1955, he enlisted in the U. S. Navy.
"When I signed up," Simmons said, "I figured it was all over, that I would go aboard a ship and be sent to Korea and probably never return."
"I didn't have much to lose," he added, "because I didn't have anything to begin with."
However, the time that Simmons spent in the Navy was different. He was not sent to Korea and he never set foot on a ship.

His four years of Naval Service consisted of training in the medical corps and for the duration of his enlistment, he was assigned on the East Coast.
For a person who wanted to be average, many pleasant things were in Simmons' favor. On completing his basic training, Simmons was sent to pharmacy school in Portsmouth, Va., where he trained and was advanced to pharmacist mate third class.
Later, he was assigned as a supervisor for pharmacist trainees at the naval dispensary in Hingham, Mass., the naval hospital at Newport, R. I., and the naval hospital in Boston, Mass.
