sixty years of existence, is moving into activities such as economic development, public-community relations, housing and welfare, and other areas related to the social and economic plight of low-income residents of the black community.

This new grant will enable the League to continue and expand these programs to reach additional people in additional cities in new ways.

This is the second year that the Ford Foundation has contributed to support of the League's work in urban and rural ghettos. Some 80 programs in 55 cities are currently in operation.

While a portion of the grant has been designated for general purposes as well as new thrust activities, other funds have been earmarked for the following:

(1) The establishment of a technical assistance program to help set up community centers.

(2) The creation of a consumer products project to promote the interest of low-income buyers.

(3) The acceleration of a Black Executive Exchange Program in which Negroes working in top management jobs in private industry teach courses at black colleges and universities.

(4) The establishment of a technical assistance program for nonprofit housing.

(5) The continuation of the Labor Education Advancement Program (LEAP), which is concerned with widening apprenticeship training for blacks and creating a pool of black contractors.

The Foundation's initial grant for the League's new thrust activities last year amounted to $1,050,000.

5. EAST STREET ROBBERY

Two males walked up to Arthur C. Manning and got away with his wallet and $1 in coins. Patrolman Glen Westbrook reported that Manning stated that he was asked whether or not he had any money. Before he could reply, he said, one of the robbers reached into his pocket and took his billfold and one dollar in change.

The 9:35 p.m. Tuesday robbery provided little clues for the police to work on. Manning gave only a description in which he stated that his assailants were around 25 years of age. The pair escaped on foot. The wallet was valued at $3.

FIRST DEGREE BURGLARY

A would-be burglar was discovered in the act and chased off by his victim, Mrs. Mary Greene Powell told investigating officers that she "heard a noise" in her living room. She went to the living room and found a male "half in and half out" of her window.

Mrs. Powell stated that the man threatened to kill her if she did not cooperate, but, she managed to get to her bedroom and return with a .22 blank pistol. The man fled when the gun was produced.

Police arrived on the scene in time to give chase to the would-be burglar, but he got away. Reports list the man as of medium build and height. A lamp valued at $5 was reportedly damaged in the burglary attempt.

merchants on the Sweepstakes page. They will also be printed on the front page as usual. The businesses whose advertisements carry the winning numbers (there will be three weekly) will award the person carrying the proper slip and number, either the cash or the equivalent merchandise. This will be left entirely up to the merchant. No slips will be presented to the merchant before bringing them to the CAROLINIAN, no later than 5 p.m. Monday of each week. After presenting them to the CAROLINIAN, they will be verified and properly processed before any winner presents a winning ticket to the merchant. All tickets are void after 5 p.m. on Monday of each week. All unclaimed money will go into a jackpot and, during a special drawing, either once a month or once every three months, there will be a special drawing. The winning ticket holder in this special drawing will be awarded merchandise or cash, whatever amount the jackpot is worth. Cash or merchandise will be given at the discretion of The CAROLINIAN.

No member of The CAROLINIAN's personnel or their families is eligible to accept an award should their house number be drawn. No purchase of The CAROLINIAN is necessary to be eligible to accept a prize.

The new CAROLINIAN Sweepstakes will go into effect during the next three or four weeks. Time is needed by this newspaper to distribute the numbers to each home in the city and county. The starting date will be announced.

Check the Sweepstakes page weekly. You may find your number in one of the spaces in the advertisements.

However, in a paper prepared jointly with Henry S. The picture for black business enterprise was cloudy in Brimmer's and Terrall's report. "The attempt to expand small-scale Negro-owned businesses is running against a strong national trend, the pair added.

Mrs. Grissom also stated that she heard no disturbance, fight or anything.

Prior arrests for Ellis have been on August 25, 1966, when he was charged with driving without an operator's license, and November 3, this year, when a capias was served upon him.

Young Larkins has served three years in the Army and had only been released a short time at the time of his death.

Funeral services for him were conducted Wednesday of this week at 1 p.m. at the Thayer Memorial Baptist Church, 5, Mount Street, with the Rev. George Robinson officiating. Burial took place in the National Cemetery, Rock Quarry Road.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Johnson Larkins of the home; one son, Stephen Ashley Larkins of the home; his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Johnnie Hatley of the home; and other relatives.

broken window, looked in and stood face to face with Howell. Mr. Worth said he ran for help at this time. He said he saw a security officer for the hotel. The officer summoned Mr. Shaffer, who was on duty inside the hotel.

According to Worth, Shaffer "hollered good and loud" on more than one occasion for the man to come out with his hands over his head.

Shaffer said he belted on his gun as he ran from the hotel and backed his car up Salisbury Street to the scene of the crime. He said he got out of his car, started back for his flashlight, then heard the man coming out.

Shaffer said that after he called several times for the man to come out with both hands over his head, Shaffer said Howell started out, backing through the window with his left hand held over his head.

"He had a gun in his right hand," declared Shaffer. "He came around toward me, and that's when I shot him."

The gun was later found to be a .22 calibre blank pistol, loaded with five blanks.

Shaffer owns and operates a private security agency, Shaffer's Patrol Service, located on Dartmouth Road here.

A driver's license found on Howell's body identified him, although he was also known by the alias of Floyd Sledge.

erment contractors in the shipbuilding, shipping, and other maritime industries. The office will audit the affirmative action plans of these industries to assure that all minorities have access to the job opportunities available.

A new feature of this compliance activity will be a program to promote the training of the hard-core unemployed for skilled jobs in the shipbuilding industry. The program also calls for training to upgrade minorities who have been traditionally employed in unskilled and semi-skilled jobs in the shipbuilding industry. The action comes at a time when labor shortages exist in the industry, and expansion of shipbuilding is anticipated.

Mr. Gibson indicated that the Office of Civil Rights will also review the employment practices of the agency itself to assist in promoting equality of opportunity. One program already underway is a special recruiting drive in minority communities for cadets for the U. S. Merchant Marine Academy. This Federal academy, located at Kings Point, New York, prepares young men for careers as officers in the Merchant Marine. In the past, few minority members attended the school, primarily because minorities were not informed of the opportunities available. Mr. Gibson expects to correct this deficiency in the next entering class.

The new office will be headed by John M. Heneghan, who has

Bishop To Offer Computer Training To '70

DALLAS, Texas — A cooperative program between Bishop College in Dallas, Texas, and the Central Data Institute of Dallas, which is unique in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, and perhaps totally new, has been announced jointly by the administrative heads of the two institutions involved—Dr. Milton K. Curry, Jr., President of Bishop, and Mr. James Eung, Director of Central Data Institute. The program enables students to enroll in two-year courses leading to Associate degrees in Computer Programming Technology and Computer Engineering Technology, with the student alternating half year semesters between Bishop College and Central Data Institute.

Quoting from the material prepared by both institutions, "The objective of the Program and Computer Engineering curriculum is to prepare qualified men and women for responsible positions in one of today's fastest-growing industries—electronic data processing."

"There exists today an acute need for highly skilled persons to maintain and program computers and computer systems."

It is this shortage of competent personnel which the Bishop-Central Data program hopes to help alleviate. Certainly, the various aspects of the computer industry offer great career opportunities for the young people of today with any talent whatsoever among these lines. However, the cooperative effort offers additional advantages to the students. Bishop College's Academic Dean, Dr. Charles Knight, has devised a curriculum whereby students who receive the associate degree can elect to enroll at Bishop for an additional two years and receive a bachelor's degree, thus getting "the best of both worlds."

The curricula leading to the associate degrees are aimed at preparing the students to work with any type of computing system manufactured today.

Dr. Knight announced that plans call for the implementation of these courses to begin with Bishop's 1970 Spring Semester, with registration beginning January 22, 1970.

PREGNANCY PLANNING AND HEALTH

BY MRS. GLORIA RIGGSBEE

Dear Mrs. Riggsbee:

I am very sorry to learn that you are expecting my sixth baby—and I never wanted but two in the first place. I was using the loop method when I got pregnant, too. What I want to know is why do these doctors keep inserting the loop into women I thought I wouldn't get pregnant. I thought I wouldn't have anything to worry about as long as the loop was in place. I just don't understand it. How could I have gotten pregnant?

Mrs. C. S. Dear Mrs. C. S.: I can very sorry to learn that the loop method didn't work for you. However, most doctors make certain that their patients understand that the loop is not 100% successful. It is about 98% effective. In other words, out of 100 women using the loop for a year, about two of them will become pregnant. You were unlucky enough to be one of the two.

Unfortunately, there are failures with every method. If a woman does not take the birth control pills according to direction, she may become pregnant. Faithful use of the diaphragm and jelly method, the creams or foams can also result in pregnancy.

Even though the method you were using was not effective for you this time, you should not "give up" contraception because the chances of your becoming pregnant again will be far greater. Statistics show that out of every 100 women who do not use a contraceptive, 80 will become pregnant in a year.

Dear Mrs. Riggsbee: I am a new bride of two months, and so far everything is going fine. Before I got married, I had some questions about sex that I never asked my mother or the doctor. Most of my questions have been answered since I've been married. But I still have one question—is it dangerous to my health or my husband's health to have sex when I am having a period? Please answer my question in your column. I read it every week and learn a lot. Mrs. R. E.

Dear Mrs. R. E.: No—it is not harmful to either your health or your husband's to have sex relations when you are having a period. In fact, some women feel more relaxed about intercourse at this time of the month because there is so little chance of becoming pregnant. Others feel it is too messy. Whether or not you have relations at the time of your period is entirely a matter of personal choice.

My marriage is in a terrible mess and I'm real unhappy, so I hope you can help me. We have four children and we have been married for six years. I know it's wrong but ever since the last baby was born, I don't want to give my husband his "rights" because I'm so afraid of getting pregnant again, and I just don't want any more children. Lately, my husband has been staying away from the house a lot and I suspect another woman. Our marriage is no good any more without him. What can I do? Mrs. P. R.

There is no reason for you, your husband, or your marriage to suffer. The answer to your problem is family planning—using one of the medically approved methods of birth control so that you will not have to be afraid of pregnancy each time you have relations with your husband.

There are a number of safe and effective methods, and you can find out about them by seeing your doctor or visiting the Wake County Health Department, 3010 New Barn Avenue, where services are free. They can help you decide which method is best for you and your husband.

Address letters to Mrs. Gloria Riggsbee, 214 Cameron Avenue, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, 27514.

Offie Taylor Packs Astrodome

HOUSTON, Tex. — In New York, fans press to get a look at Barbara Streisand who stars in "Hello Dolly." But, in Houston's Astrodome where the University of Houston plays its basketball games, the name is "Hello Offie."

The star of the show is Houston's 6-foot-2 basketball great, Offie Taylor. He is known for his jumping and shooting ability which he picked up on the playgrounds of New York—a natural breeding grounds for basketball talent.

Taylor's recent showmanship saw him pour in 26 points to give Houston a 91-76 upset victory over previously unbeaten and eight-time-ranked Santa Clara in the Astrodome.

The victory pushed the Houston Cougars from 19th place in the standings to 8th. It also extended their winning streak to seven straight.
