Attacks Statement Of Black Militant

Says Jews Exploiting Landlords

NEW YORK - The American Jewish Congress last Friday charged that a "gross libel" has been perpetrated when a black militant student told delegates to the United Nations World Youth Assembly, on a tour of Harlem the day before, that "Jews, predominantly" were the exploiting landlords of slum buildings.

In a letter to Neville Wade, the British youth delegate who asked about the ownership of the buildings he saw, Congress said the answer that slum housing was owned predominantly by Jews "is entirely unwarranted."

The letter, signed by Theodore J. Kolish, chairman of the executive board of Congress' New York Metropolitan Council, cited the recent city housing study by Professor David Sternlieb of Rutgers University, which found, according to the New York Times report of May 1, that black landlords own 52 per cent of the all-black buildings and 20 per cent of the buildings that are mostly black. Similarly, in Spanish-speaking areas, most of the buildings are owned by Spanish-speaking landlords.

Mr. Kolish asked Mr. Wade to distribute copies of his letter to the other youth delegates before the assembly adjourned; the American Jewish Congress sent several hundred to him at the United Nations by messenger.

In the letter, the Congress leader wrote: "unquestionably, some of the slum property in New York is owned by Jews, just as some is owned by members of the many other groups that make up the population of New York. It is (See A.J.C. BLASTS, P. 2)
