Ex-Prof. Receives An Award

GREENSBORO - Dr. Joseph S. Himes, who joined the faculty of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro in 1969 after 23 years as professor of sociology at Durham's North Carolina Central University, Friday was named by the North Carolina Family Life Council as the recipient of the 1970 Sperry Award.

The award, named for the late Dr. Irwin V. Sperry, honors persons who have been influential in the development of family life education.

Dr. Himes, who has held two Fulbright Professorships (to Helsinki University in Finland and to India's Madras University), is the author of two books, "The Study of Sociology: An Introduction," and "Social Planning In America: A Dynamic Interpretation."

He has contributed to many other books and has published more than 50 articles in professional journals. Earlier this month, he presented a paper before the Seventh World Congress on Sociology held in Bulgaria. His professional memberships and affiliations embrace most of the leading sociological and family relations associations of the national and world scene.

Dr. Himes, who has been almost totally blind since an accident in high school chemistry laboratory when he was 15, is vice chairman of the North Carolina Blind Advisory Committee.

Using a portable typewriter, Dr. Himes continued his secondary education in Cleveland, Ohio's, East High School, from which he graduated with a 98.5 average in 1927. He received the B. A. degree Magna Cum Laude from Oberlin College in 1931, after having been elected to Phi Beta Kappa in 1930.

I have not sat with vain persons, neither will I go in with dissemblers.
