Shaw's HIP Project Is Refunded

Congressman Nick Galifianakis' Office announced Friday that The Office of Economic Opportunity has refunded Shaw University to the tune of $95,000 for a Health Information Project which is geared to education for the sexually active adolescent.

The project, which is going into its third year at Shaw is a part of the University's continuing education division.

Mrs. Patricia Mitchell, director of the program, said that unlike previous years the educational phase of the program will develop an executive a new thrust. Shaw's School of Urban Sciences will play two principal roles aimed at the expansion of the program this year. Under the direction of Dr. Dorothy Williams, Dean of the school, educational sessions have been planned to bring about a scientific understanding of the various social, cultural and economic problems which affect the life, behavior, and attitude of the youth generally. This will include their sexual behavior and attitudes.

Family Planning Sessions will take place through one of the courses now offered within the School of Urban Sciences, Urban Family in Crisis. The course will be structured in such a way as to focus on family problems including those relating to poverty, neglect, dependency, mobility and instability.

The Urban Issues and Problems Forums, one of the University's core programs, will be organized in such a way that problems and issues pertaining to population, sex and illegitimate pregnancies and their non-sexual roots will be given greater attention. Additionally, the School of Urban Sciences will supervise and direct the entire research phase of the project.

The basic objectives for Project HIP, as it is called (Short for Health Information Project) will basically be the same: reduce illegitimate pregnancies through the identification of problems and to educate both the unwed mother and the father of the child.

Mrs. Mitchell said in an interview, "That opposed to preventive sex education, emphasis will be placed on the psychology of the sexual behavior of the adolescent." She said "many unwed mothers experience problems which married women do not have such as inadequate medical care, lack of knowledge of what to expect before and after the baby arrives, mental frustration, and even being ashamed of her pregnancy." Mrs. Mitchell added, "We hope to continue our referral service to help her (the unwed mother) solve some or all of these problems. Through these referrals, the program will guide the mother to the proper source for medically supervised birth control methods best suited for her.

If the mother does not want the child, then we have a built-in plan to assist her with a referral source for adoption of the child. During one of her lectures to the youthful participants Dr. Stephen Schultz of the Wake County Health Department's family planning section said, out of 4,000 births in Wake County in 1968, 464 were illegitimate, and of those more than half (261) were born to teenage girls. "This is the kind of problem we are dealing with," said Mrs. Mitchell.

APPAREL MARKETS
NEW YORK-A new specialized marketing service pioneered by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. identified 117,000 retail and wholesale apparel establishments and price range. The computerized service evolved as a ment's family planning section said, out of 4,000 births in Wake County in 1968, 464 were illegitimate, and of those more than half (261) were born to teenage girls. "This is the kind of problem we are dealing with," said Mrs. Mitchell.

It is possible that more than half a million lives were lost in the recent storm-flood disaster in East Pakistan. A disproportionate number of the dead were children. Well over two million survivors were left shelterless and without food, and rescue operations are hampered by transportation and communications difficulties. The true extent of this tragedy may never be known.

How can our children make good in school when they have to make do with makeshift?

Today in Wake County, our children are having to prepare for the future in classrooms that in many cases are relics of the past.

Our children are going to school in classrooms that are overcrowded, poorly lighted, crumbling with age and poorly ventilated.

Without immediate work, these conditions are going to get much worse.

The $10 million school bond issue will help us meet our immediate school needs. Our county commissioners have pledged that this money will be spent equally between the county and city school systems.

The one cent local sales tax will help us move toward a pay-as-we go basis. Our county commissioners have pledged that 90 percent of the county's share of this money also will be spent on our schools.

The school bond issue and local one cent sales tax is a reasonable way to meet our needs. It is fair to everyone and will not place financial strain on anyone.

Our children need our help now. In a county that ranks among the highest in per capita income, we can afford to provide for our children. We certainly can't afford not to.
