Blacks Must Gain Power, Says Mayor Charles Evers

DENMARK, S. C.-Charles Evers, black mayor of Fayette, Mississippi, told community leaders, faculty and staff members, and students of Voorhees College last week that the black man must gain political and economic power if he wants respect.

Mayor Charles Evers, brother of slain civil rights worker, Medgar Evers, said, "Political and economic power is the only real means of gaining recognition as first class citizens." Evers urged Negroes to stop talking about going back to Africa and work in the United States to become a meaningful part of it.

We are Americans and our forefathers helped to build this country," he said. "This is the best and most wonderful country on earth."

Evers went on to outline the political strategy that was used in his successful campaign in Mississippi. "Winning of power does not give you the right to abuse it," said Evers. "Always be fair and in the long run, you will be better off." He said, "While Negroes have been known to be discriminated against by white officeholders, they have inadvertently held back whites as well because of their discriminating practices:

apply the law equally and justly, this is the only way."

After the speech, an estimated 300 persons attended a reception at the home of Voorhees College President, Dr. Harry P. Graham. Evers arrived on campus about 6:30 p. m. and was presented the key to the city by Denmark Mayor Walter E. Brooker who was a platform guest during the program.

He was met at the airport by Columbia Mayor John T. Campbell, James Felder, member of the House of Representatives, and a delegation from Voorhees College headed by Dr. and Mrs. Graham, and Mrs. Catherine W. Moore, member of the Trustee Board, and her husband.

Links To Present Talented Youth

Mrs. Nora Lockhart, committee chairman, presided, and presented Mrs. Willie Kay, who opened the meeting with prayer. Greetings were extended by the Links' president, Mrs. Mary Flagg, after which, Mrs. Lockhart outlined the plan to discover, present and encourage the talented youth in this area.

Raleigh's Bill Knight Writes On "The Makings Of A Black Candidate"

BY W. R. (BILL) KNIGHT
 Associate Executive Secretary, Raleigh Human Relations Committee

To political scientists, the names of Edward C. Banfield, James Q. Wilson, Zimmerman, Robert A. Dahl and Erving Phillips are not strangers. They are all political scientists with their feet on the ground concerning State and local government and the politics involved. Add to these names, if one considers himself Black, Adam Clayton Powell, Charles Diggs, the late William E. Dawson, Julian Bond, Stokely Carmichael, Channing Phillips, and Sister Shirley Chisholm. You should understand a different, but related, knowledge of Black political action.

Thus, it should be understood that the making of a Black political candidate depends upon three areas. First, the academic understanding of politics. This includes being able to assert the actual limitations of his power in relationship to public need over public demand. An example of this would be the funding of a public works project because of a critical need and the rejection of an additional mini-park although many citizens have requested a park.

Second, a black candidate for public office must have insight into future trends. This insight is many times called by Blacks, "Political Savvy." It basically means, to have sense enough to listen and courage enough to sincerely consider the positions that you have taken. The best candidates I have known have let their organization do the real campaigning while they have spent time being seen and not heard. Thus, the sounding effect by people who actually convinced themselves that the candidate was a rational person and they were able to communicate. The loss of one vote should be a major concern of a Black candidate.

Thirdly, politics is a rough game. Get involved and you are going to have conflicts and defeats. Politics is like football, boxing, hockey or basketball -- all in one. If you don't want to be hit, have conflicts or be defeated then don't get in the political arena. Let's make sure we understand that if a Black candidate gets elected, it is only the beginning of the game. There are many inhumanities that the Black candidate will suffer. A black official and candidate understands this. It's a part of the political game.

A Black candidate is mostly questioned about past involvements and commitments, in a political arena. Whether you are old or young, involvements cost. A candidate's basic commitment will determine how much he will pay through involvement. Thus to be a Black candidate you must put everything on the line.

Before a campaign is over, your family and friends will be pushed to the limits of their endurance and patience with the campaign. The doubts and fears will mount. A candidate will question whether he or she is really the right candidate. At this point your campaign is at a critical state. The pressure on your shoulders will cause your legs to buckle or either your adrenalin will flow. If your adrenalin flows, enthusiasm, confidence and optimism will make your campaign a success.

I hope that these few words haven't discouraged anyone from seeking office. My intentions are to relate the program, hardships and the little joy in being a Black candidate.

Employment gains by blacks have been rapid over the past decade. Aided by the heavy demand for manpower during these years of economic expansion, blacks increased their employment by 1.6 million or 23 percent between 1961 and 1969.
