happy to say congratulations, for you are like workmen who were building a strong road for heavy duty road congestion. There was a layer of soft sand on the road bed entirely unsuitable to drive over. Few things are more difficult to drive through than loose sand. It is too soft. Over on one side was a pile of large rough cobblestones some of which had rolled down onto the sand and scattered along a portion of the roadbad. They, too, would have been almost impossible to ride over in a car, at least faster than a snail's pace. A workman, however, was setting the rough cobblestone in the soft sand regularly and evenly and the result was a firm, hard and comparatively smooth road, capable of supporting the heaviest truck. The combination of the soft sand and the hard brick arranged properly and leveled off made a fine road. How much we are like this roadway. When we are first born, we are soft, impressionable and weak, unfit for life's travels. Then trouble and stumbling blocks are thrown into the soft life. They don't make the road any smoother. In fact, they seem to make it more unfit for travel. But you and your thoughts are the workman. You take the stumbling blocks, the difficulties and hardships and rearrange them. They are pressed into the impressionable roadbed of life, leveled off and arranged evenly. This builds the road which can carry the load. The strain and stress of life is relieved. Don't ignore the trouble and stumbling blocks which are in your path. Don't toss them a side, use them. Smooth off the rough edges and arrange them. Cobblestones can be stumbling blocks and paving stones. It is
