Senior Citizens News

BY MRS. MAY L. BROADIE
Last Wednesday the Senior Citizens opened their meeting with devotions with the president, Mrs. Melvina Ferrell, presiding. The secretary, Mrs. Mary Henry and the nurse were also present. Information on health and how to keep well was discussed. After the class everyone was served a spicy hot home-cooked dinner, which was most enjoyable.

Last Friday morning, the Sewing Circle held its regular meeting under the leadership of Mrs. Ura Jones, who brought many helpful hints to sewing. Mrs. Ferrell and Mrs. Henry were attending a two-day course on health and better care. Also, Miss Carrie Jackson, who always brings a beautiful thought on what you might call telling your neighbor was missed very much. However, we carried on. Our center director, Mrs. Sandra G. Byrd was present and we sailed onward. She brought beautiful greetings. Time in its onward flight has brought us to many roads that lead to the knowledge of God. I have chosen to follow the road that is always under construction with a thankful heart, mindful of God's mercy, His blessings and goodness as I travel this way. One must even expect persecution, for the road demands intelligence, honesty, faith, truth-seeking, the willingness to question one's faith and to modify it. Changes in direction may be necessary. Challenges will have to be answered and decisions made. Yet if the earnest seeker dares this adventure and proceeds toward new horizons, he will soon find himself. In the company of leaders in what has been called new reformation it may be that you will find ways to improve on this road's construction. Perhaps in time to survey the area yet to be developed. It has been a great pleasure and honor for me to have served the office as Center Director, for which I shall always be mindful and thankful first to God and to you for the great privilege of meeting and greeting so many senior citizens. So with love for each other and the determination to live closer each day with God guiding us, let us step fearlessly onto the many tasks and duties that lie before us to help build a bigger and better senior citizens club. Come each week and join us. We will be looking for you!

NCCU Orator Cites Changes For Better In Women's Rights

DURHAM - Mrs. Allie Latimer Weeden, chief counsel, officer of general counsel, U.S. General Services Administration, told North Carolina Central University law students Friday that women are seeing the legal system in this nation gradually change from a system that actively oppressed them to one which offers some hope for equal rights.

She spoke at a morning session which was originally to have been addressed by N. C. Representative Henry E. Frye. Frye spoke in Mrs. Weeden's place at a luncheon for law students and alumni Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Weeden said sexual discrimination was as oppressive as racial discrimination, and told the students that "black women lawyers who know the pains of racial and sexual discrimination" are the logical leaders for the women's rights campaign. Twenty percent of N. C. Central's law students are women.

She cited examples of discrimination in the law, including states excluding women from juries, or requiring them to ask to be placed on jury lists, and welfare rules which discriminate against women. "There has never been a woman-in-the-house rule for men," Mrs. Weeden said. Working women, Mrs. Weeden said, are still employed for the most part at lower pay and are given less official responsibility. "Most working women work because they need the money," she said. "Don't be misled by the idea that they are working for pin money." Although courts have not yet recognized sexual equality as a
