Association Of Black Lawyers Organized In North Carolina

A group of Black lawyers from all over the State met in Greensboro on June 25, 26, and 27 and organized themselves into an association under the name "Association of Black Lawyers of North Carolina."

During its final session, the Association adopted the following resolution: "That whereas in the experience of members of the Association distinction in the handling of cases and the treatment of defendants in criminal cases is all too often made, based on race or color; And whereas members of the Association themselves all too often are not accorded the same respect, opportunities and treatment accorded non-black lawyers; And whereas law enforcement has much too often been oppressively and unfairly applied to black suspects, because of their race; And whereas it is patently apparent the Black members of the North Carolina State Bar are in all respects qualified to serve the benches of the various courts of North Carolina; but are consistently and systematically excluded from appointments to such posts; And whereas, even in the organization and operation of the North Carolina State Bar, which has complete authority and control over all licensed attorneys in the State, Black attorneys are excluded from active participation in the functioning of the North Carolina State Bar; And where-

Radiothon Gets Good Support

BY CURETON LEE JOHNSON The members of the Apollo Heights Homebuyers Association aren't the type to sit by idly and wait for someone else to hold their hand. Last weekend, the association sponsored a radiothon which netted funds and pledges for the children's educational summer program. But the group hasn't...

'Mixing,' Status Are Reasons

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - The 35 public colleges and universities which were created to serve black Americans are in imminent danger of losing their identity through integration, merger, reduced status or outright abolition, according to a report just released by the Race Relations Information Center (RRIC) in Nashville, Tenn.

The black colleges, the report says, "were designed to be separate and proclaimed to be equal, but none of them ever has been provided with the resources or the support to achieve true parity with the colleges and universities created to serve whites."

The RRIC report, compiled by John Egerton and Pat Braden, says "there is practically nothing to indicate that any of the states is committed to a guarantee of actual equality for any black college or university. A few of the institutions may have moved closer to that ideal, and some of the states have achieved substantial desegregation both in their formerly all-black and their previously all-white colleges and universities, but the prevailing pattern is one of racially separate and qualitatively unequal higher education."

Three of the institutions - West Virginia State College, Bluefield, W. Va. State College and Lincoln University of Missouri - now have a majority of white students, and three others - Delaware State, Bowie (Md) State and Kentucky State - have white enrollments of over 30 per cent. Three school-Maryland State, Prairie View A&M (Tex.) and Arkansas AM&N - have been absorbed by larger and older universities.

In addition, 14 of the black institutions have direct competition from predominantly white state institutions located in the same cities and towns and at least three others are within easy commuting distance of a white college.

Top Student Succeeding In Raleigh

BY CURETON JOHNSON A lot can happen to a man in eight years, especially the eight years right after one leaves high school.

A young man who served as the president of his senior class and is chosen "most business-like" by his peers is generally personable and a leader by example.

William E. Manuel, while going through the halls of Ligon High School like so many other black Raleigh youths have done, served both of these capacities. He was also a member of the drama club, football team, track club and Esquires Social Order.

But since leaving the hallow-

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column or feature is produced in the public interest with an aim towards eliminating its contents. Numerous individuals have requested that they be given the consideration of overlooking their listing on the police blotter. This we would like to do. However, it is not our position to be judge or jury. We merely publish the facts as we find them reported by the arresting officers. To keep out of the Crime Beat columns, merely means not being registered by a police officer. In reporting his findings while on duty, so simply keep off the "Blotter" and you won't be in the Crime Beat.

TEACHER CONFRONTS WALLACE - Montgomery, Ala. Governor George C. Wallace (r) met with key legislators and officials of the Alabama Education Association behind closed doors June 29 to discuss a possible reduction in state support for the teachers' retirement system. After the meeting Gov. Wallace held a hallway news conference where he praised withholding half of the state's contribution from the teachers' retirement system to pump money into the mental health program, a plan which is denounced by teachers. During the news conference Gov. Wallace was confronted by a black teacher, Irvin Smith, vice president of the Birmingham chapter of the American Federation of Teachers(1), who asked the Governor why he was using the retirement funds as a "political football." Drive At Tuttle Is Underway

The public phase of the $165,000 Tuttle Community Center Survival Fund began with a kick-off meeting Tuesday evening in the amphitheatre at St. Augustine's College.

The special gifts phase, chaired by Clarence Lightner, is the second and final segment of the drive to raise $165,000. Volunteer workers in this division will be responsible for the solicitation of small business firms and individuals in the Raleigh area.

The money will be used to build a new building, including 6 pre-school classrooms and a multi-purpose community activities center at 310 N. Taboro Road, Tuttle Community Center, a United Fund agency, is operating a child day care and community center in an antiquated wooden frame structure (See TUTTLE, P. 2)
