GOTENBURG, Sweden - Precisely at 11:58 a.m. the train from Oslo rolled into the station at Gotenburg. As expected, it was on time, Swedes brag that their transportation system is never late. Some say the engineer will refuse to stop at a station if he is running late. So far, so good!

Standing on the platform are for their American visitors. The Swedish coordinator of "The Experiment in International Living," Ann Palmquist, introduces the experimentors to their Swedish families. She explains that my family is away this week and that I will live with her family for a few days. Ann's meet me. They were Inga - the mother, Tolly - the father, and Gunilla, her 16-year-old sister. Ann is 19.

When all the experimentors had said goodbye, we left the station in the family's 1972 Renault. Ann returned to work in her Volvo. I noticed that 90 per cent of the cars parked at the station were either Renaults or Volovs. I saw no American-made cars.

The trip from the station to the Palmquist's home took about 20 minutes. They live about 11 kilometers (European method many Swedish people waiting of measuring distance) from Gotenborg, in Askim, Along the route we saw very old flats (apartments), modern high-rise flats, and private homes.

sure that I would enjoy my stay here.

Inga led the way into her home. First, there is a front courtyand which is beautifully furnished with white, wooden outdoor furniture and a yellow and white beach umbrella, Sitting around the yard are many round cement pots filled with flowers. Inga says Swedes always decorate their homes with many flowers, especially violets, small daisies, and pansies.

I am very impressed by the size of the rooms inside the house. The Palmquists have three bedrooms, a kitchen, dining room, living room, parlor (used by the daughters to entertain their guests), and two bathrooms. The kitchen is particularly impressive with its double-door refrigerator, dish-can begin drinking. After lunch I spent the afternoon getting to know my hosts. We discussed some of the cultural differences. For example, it is customary for Swedes to say "thank you" or "tack" each time something is passed at the dinner table. Then, at the conclusion of the meal each person must thank the mother for "cooking such a wonderful meal." In all, "tack" is said seven times during each meal.

I was also fascinated to hear of the Swedish way of drinking wine and liquor. No one ever drinks before a toast is said by the male host. The toast is completed by everyone saying "skole," then all can drink. Usually, each time thereafter anyone who wants a sip turns to someone and says "skole," and they both drink. No one takes a sip alone.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Until recently only two Black colleges offered substantial journalism programs, Now more than 40 offer courses, according to an article by Roger M. Williams in the Columbia Journalism Review, July-August, 1971.

Williams says these programs "can scarcely be compared to those at major white institutions. They are burdened both by an antipathy of Black success in the field. Yet the programs, thanks to the dedication of students and instructors, are turning out a fair number of promising young journalists." Williams mentioned "noteworthy programs, established in recent years at Hampton Institute in Virginia, Shaw University in Raleigh, Bishop College in Dallas, Clark College in Atlanta, and Malcolm X College, a two-year institution in Chicago. If you're good enough to get an Army ROTC scholarship, it'll pay for all your tuition, books and lab fees. And give you year 'round spending money.

If you're a high school graduate and you take ROTC when you get a crack at a three-year scholarship in your freshman year. Or a two-year one the year after. Or one that'll pay for your last year.

With Army ROTC, you never lose. Even if you don't win a scholarship and the folks wind up footing the bills, you get an Army commission when you graduate. That makes a college investment pay off a lot better. For years to come.

As an Army officer, you'll exercise leadership. Manage men and material. Work closely with people from all walks of life. From all over the country. And you'll have the chance to see some of the world,
