

D.C. Exhibition Honors Bethune Through August

As a result of the widespread interest in the exhibition honoring Mary McLeod Bethune, the National Portrait Gallery-Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., has announced that the showing of Bethune memorabilia will remain on view through August.

The opening of the exhibition on June 19 coincided with groundbreaking ceremonies for a memorial to Mrs. Bethune in Lincoln Park, Washington, D. C. It includes photographs spanning her lifetime and documenting her role with world leaders; an ebony cane, which had belonged to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, presented to Mrs. Bethune by his wife, and a decoration awarded to her by the Republic of Liberia. The majority of the material is on loan from Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Florida, which she founded.

The planned memorial to Mary McLeod Bethune is sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women who have obtained an extension of the Presidential and Congressional authorization necessary to erect what will be the first memorial to a Black American on public land in the nation's capital. This living tribute to one of Black America's most renowned educators is envisioned as long overdue recognition of the black man's heritage and contribution to American life. It must be erected without cost to the Federal Government.

Mrs. Bethune founded the National Council of Women in 1935. Today, it is a coalition of twenty-five nationally affiliated organizations with an outreach to approximately 3.8 million women, and is recognized as a catalyst in the field of social action.

It costs about $12 a month to run two window air conditioning units. Here's how you can do it for less.

At CP&L we think it's our responsibility to help you get the most out of your electric service for the least amount of money.

And since one of the most expensive things to operate around your house is your air conditioner, here are some suggestions that can be a lot of help to you this summer.

If you're getting ready to buy, be sure you buy the right one.

This standard information appears on all air conditioning units. Before you buy, ask your dealer to explain what it all means. Then ask him

MODEL NUMBER	AWM-C60-20	SEASONAL ENERGY EFFICIENCY RATIO	115	SEASONAL ENERGY EFFICIENCY RATIO	6000
SERIAL NUMBER	EB10-333076	OPERATING CURRENT	126.5	WATTAGE	1020
		TEST PROVISION	15.5	AMPS	9.5

to help you figure out which unit gives you the most cooling for the least amount of electricity.

And here's something you probably aren't aware of. While central air conditioning costs more to install, it will cost you 15-20 percent less to operate than comparable size window units.

How to keep the cool air inside and the hot air outside.

Proper insulation can make a big difference in the cost of cooling your home. (And the same holds true, of course, for heating.)

On a hot summer day, the temperature in your attic can reach 140°-160°. Without adequate insulation and ventilation, this hot air will radiate down into your home, making the air conditioning work harder and longer.

You can also reduce the heat penetrating in your house by as much as 50 percent by keeping your drapes and blinds closed on windows exposed to direct sunlight.

Nonprofit Groups Have Role In Civil Rights

PORTLAND, Ore. - Non-profit organizations have an important role to play in solving the problems of housing management and building toward the goal of free and open communities, an official of the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development said last week.

Addressing a dinner of the Law and Moderate Income Housing Development and Management Seminar, HUD Assistant Secretary for Equal Opportunity Samuel J. Simmons said since his last meeting with nonprofit sponsors the department has taken a number of steps reflecting increased concern in these two critical areas.

The creation of the office of a HUD assistant secretary whose sole responsibility is housing management was a most significant event, said Mr. Simmons.

"This organizational change is a reflection not only of the breadth of HUD's housing management responsibilities, but of the growing problems and pressures in that area which require concentrated, high level leadership and direction in HUD if they are to be effectively resolved," he said.

Mr. Simmons cited as further evidence, a recent contract with the National Corporation for Housing Partnerships to develop a model training program in housing management. He foresaw the establishment within a few years of a major institute or center for housing management which could professionalize the field and help deal with the current difficult financial and social problems.

Simmons said that HUD also is acting to increase economic opportunities for minority workers and businessmen.

Overcooling and improper maintenance can overwork your air conditioner.

And for each degree you raise the thermostat on your air conditioner, you can save at least five percent on the cost of operation.

So it will pay you to place the thermostat on the highest comfortable setting and leave it there.

Also, be sure to check all filters periodically to make sure they are clean. Dirty and clogged filters put unnecessary strain on the equipment, as well as your pocketbook when it's time to pay your monthly electric bill.

If you learned something from this ad, you'll learn a lot more when you get your next bill.

We have a lot more helpful suggestions on air conditioning that will be included in your next bill.

And we've also prepared a little booklet that tells you all kinds of ways to save on your electric service and help conserve our natural resources.
