Poor Eastern N.C. Counties Receive Economic Guidance

The Economic Development Corporation, with headquarters in an old school building in Warren County, has a unique style of aiding the disadvantaged. Organized in response to the fact that many of the poor in Eastern North Carolina were not benefiting significantly from available federal programs, either because they were unaware of them or because they lacked the organizations and mechanisms to use them, EDC was chartered as a non-profit. Non partisan educational organization in early 1969. Its aim was to bridge the information gap for the disadvantaged.

EDC's original goals were to foster community - organized economic development among the disadvantaged, inform citizens of state and federal programs which could aid economic development, and offer education and training. But the group quickly discovered that most basic human needs had to be met first.

"We were talking to people about Black entrepreneurship and Black ownership but we found first we had to take care of hunger," says EDC's executive director Mrs. Eva Clayton. Thus a major focus of the organization has become child development. Over the last two years Mrs. Clayton and the staff of 13 have not only provided information and assistance to hundreds of needy families, but have developed exciting programs in day care, aid with school desegregation, summer feeding centers, and health fairs. EDC has also developed a unique style of aiding existing community groups to implement the programs themselves.

Kiddie Kollege, in Wilson, a day program for Black and poor children sponsored by Concerned Parents of the city, had been in operation two years and was struggling to survive when EDC came in to help. At that point Kiddie Kollege was unable to mobilize local resources and was deep in debt. In the summer of 1970, EDC used Kiddie Kollege as one of the feeding centers for children. This enabled Kiddie Kollege, as co-sponsor, to expand its enrollment and operate for the summer at no cost to the local group. In the fall, EDC helped the local sponsors to get approved by the State Department of Social Services for purchase care to children of welfare mothers. As a result, Kiddie Kollege was closed to being self-sufficient this year (and in that better position was also able to get local money, through the United Fund, to complete its budget.) Kiddie Kollege now hopes to become a research and demonstration center to show how quality day care can be provided by local community groups, but without EDC, it might have gone under.

EDC not only provides this kind of technical help to existing local groups, it also helps them to create coalitions for co-sponsoring projects.

This summer the Regional Health Fair Committee, a coalition of three anti-poverty agencies and other community groups, is sponsoring health fairs staffed by doctors, nurses and trained volunteers in six eastern counties--Nash, Edgecombe, Martin, Franklin, Vance and Warren. The fairs will promote health awareness provide information on home sanitation, nutrition, venereal disease, pre-natal and infant care, TB and cancer detection, drug use and a variety of other health problems. They will also aid the development of community organization around health problems.

This summer EDC has received a grant from the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation to provide technical assistance and staff training to enable the local community and Black organizations which have sponsored feeding programs to set up on-going community-controlled Child Care Centers. Thus EDC helps community groups to build new programs on the foundations they've already achieved.

One of the most exciting new EDC programs grew out of the recent school disruptions in Warren County. In the winter of 1970-'71 the Warren schools were closed several times, 93 students were arrested, and by spring some 20-25 students had been expelled or dropped out of school. Feeling that all students should have a chance (and when they need it, a second chance) to succeed in school, EDC developed an alternative program for those students who were either out of school or failing in school. They were enrolled in special programs at Kittrell College to prepare for the GED exam (the General Education Degree, or high school equivalency), with two days a week of intensive individualized study and three days of training in community services like child development, civic education, recreation and collecting community data.

Three students in the program have already passed the GED exam and will enter college in the fall. The others are continuing in a summer program which includes tutorial classes, arts and crafts, music, Black studies, and recreation. The students will go on at Kittrell in the fall, until they pass the GED. Already EDC has been asked for help by other communities who want to develop similar programs for students who've been suspended or dropped out of school, to give them a new chance to re-enter the educational system.

Most of EDC's support has come from government and church groups, with limited assistance from government agencies. Now the group is beginning a drive to gain wider financial support from the people in the communities EDC serves.

The Annual Support Dinner to kick off the fund-raising drive will be held on Saturday, July 31, at K&W Cafeteria, Tarrytown Mall, Rocky Mount, at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Bryant George, program officer of the Ford Foundation in New York and officer of the United Presbyterian Church - USA will be guest speaker. Board members of EDC, loyal supporters, agency representatives and civic leaders are being invited to the dinner, to work in seeking wider support for EDC.

I have good health, good thoughts, and good humor, thanks be to God Almighty.

This was the third African nation visited by the civil rights leader who is conducting an SCLC Goodwill Brotherhood tour in more than 11 African countries.

A spokesman for SCLC says, "Hopefully, Mr. Williams' trip will result in Black Americans becoming as concerned and committed about their Black brothers in Africa and vice versa at least to the degree that American Jews are committed to their brothers in Israel."

In seeking help for the civil rights movement in Africa from one of Africa's strongest leaders, Williams told President Houphouet-Boigny, "The Blacks' struggle in America for equality if running into the same problems it ran into after the days of Reconstruction following the Civil War. Not only can Black Americans help Black Africans reach their potential, but Black Africans need help from their African brothers in fully realizing equality in America."

His text was taken from Romans 5:19.

Rev. S. W. Williams, pastor of First Baptist Church, was the guest speaker at the anniversary service of Elder G. L. Elliott, pastor of the Green Chapel Free Will Baptist Church in Lillington.

Along with Rev. Williams were Mrs. and Mrs. Fred Warren, Mrs. I. L. Corbett, Mrs. Emma Tatum, Mrs. Blonnie Owens, Mrs. Mary A. Bennett and

Mrs. Doretha Blue went to Washington, D. C. over the weekend to visit her aunt, Mrs. Lottie Elliott.

The senior choir, along with Mrs. Janice Wright, organist, presented the music for the morning services at First Baptist Church last Sunday. The pastor, Rev. S. W. Williams, read the scripture from St. Matt. 17:1-20.

Rev. Williams also delivered the sermon from St. John 3:3 on the subject of "Spirit Birth."

In his sermon he said that there were two kinds of birth; a natural birth and a spiritual birth which is when you are born again spiritually and save in Jesus Christ.

He said that in order for anyone to receive that spiritual birth, he must repent his sins. It was a very interesting service.

At 3 p.m. the junior choir of the church held its anniversary. Those who appeared were Miss Genene Walls, who presented the welcome address, Carla Tatum, who delivered a short address and the guest choir, St. Thomas Junior Choir, along with Mrs. Laidla McCain, pianist and Mrs. Margaret Warren, who was the mistress of ceremony. All enjoyed the program.

the mountains, a set of tennis or a walking tour through Paris, you'll want to be sure your feet are healthy.

One of the most common ailments is athlete's foot, which afflicts 16 million Americans every year. Active men between the ages of 19 and 34 are particularly susceptible because they frequent public, college or clubhouse showers and locker rooms - common breeding grounds for the fungus that causes the infection.

At the first hint of infection - between-the-toes cracking, peeling or itching - take quick action. Self-medication is usually enough.

Physicians often recommend the application of Tinctin fungicidal cream for topical treatment of fungus infection and the regular use of Tinctin powder to help reduce the risk of re-infection.
