Personal

The cousins of Terrence, Kelvin and Angela Burroughs got a chance to meet a few of their friends while visiting Raleigh recently. The occasion was a "Get Together" given by Mrs. Vivian Brown, grandmother of the Burroughs' crowd, at the Burroughs' Gregg Street home. Myra and Marguerita Blackwell of Greensboro, North Carolina enjoyed an evening of croquet, badminton, horseshoes, basketball, dodgeball, kickball, and table games while getting acquainted. Of course, foodand drinks played an important part under a grant from the U. S. Office of Education EPDA, Title V-E, Kittrell College con-ducted three two-week programs that offered a program to assist junior college personnel to understand and assist minorty group students, particularly such students that are from economically and socially different backgrounds. The session known as the EPDA minority Group Awareness Training Programs was highly successful and had over 89 junior college participants from 8 states and the District of Columbia, Over 51 institutions were represent-strators often do not understand these students and traditional instructional approaches are all adapted to meeting their needs. The program devoted four days to comparisons of minority and majority cultures; three days to instructional systems; and three days to supportive services. Instructional approaches included programmed materials, lectures practicum sessions, laboratories, readings, case studies, role-playing sessions,
