High Quality Seed is a MUST!

More acreage isn't the only reason small grain yields have jumped so sharply in the Carolinas in recent years.

Breeders can be given a lot of the credit -- for continually developing improved varieties.

Like the new dwarf-type lines that allow greater nitrogen application without causing lodging.

And earlier maturing varieties that let you double-crop with sorghum or soybeans.

Bigger and heavier small grain yields begin with the purchase of high quality seed. That's why farmers in this area buy locally adapted seed of known origin from FCX.

We're here to serve you too.
