NCSA STUDENTS TOUR CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTIONS

Students from the North Carolina School of the Arts have completed a drama tour of five correctional institutions in Raleigh, N. C. from December 17-21. A direct response to the prison riots earlier this year, the tour was arranged through the good offices of North Carolina Governor Robert Scott.

MRS. E. M. KELLY

The students presented scenes from "Requiem for a Heavyweight," a Rod Sterling drama first presented on television. Sterling granted the students permission to use the shortened version of "Requiem," without a royalty payment. The drama was supplemented with informal music.

The idea for these programs originated with Jon Woodson, a 21-year-old college junior from Sterling, Ill. Feeling that theater has always been a part of the movements for social reform, he raised with fellow student Duke Ernsburger, 21, of Charlotte, the idea of a project which might involve theater with prison reform.

Last fall, Gov. Scott made a visit to the Arts School campus, at which time the project was presented to him. The stu-students had already obtained the backing of the student government and Ronald Pollock, Dean of the School of Drama.

Jobless or underemployed persons who need basic education and language training need them badly. A report recently released by the Department of Labor states that there seems to be many among the Spanish and Chinese-speaking immigrants who have substantial skills which can be applied only after language competence has been achieved.

You'll find the Plymouth martini a sound investment. Just as your English counterparts have. Since 1793, the British have realized all the virtues of Coates & Co.'s crisp, extra-dry 94.4 proof gin.

Things are no different today. We still distill with the softest, purest water. And prized ingredients, ordered from different sources to preserve our secret recipe.

Discover the gin that was said to be a favorite of the British Admiralty.
