SCARBOROUGH (CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)

Scarborough, Jr., and one adopted son, Ronald H. Scarborough, Durham; two grandsons, J. C. Scarborough, III of Durham, and Peter M. Stanford of Chicago; and several nieces and nephews. Born in Kinston on June 17, 1878, Scarborough came to Durham and established the Scarborough and Hargett Funeral Home in 1907, only one year following his graduation from the Renouard School of Embalming in New York City.

Following a philosophy of "service and thriftiness," Scarborough's influence was felt by many other pioneer businessmen, and his wisdom and guidance was sought by black and white alike. He was one of the first directors of the Mechanics and Framers Bank, and held the distinction of a life-time board member at his death. Also, served as one of the early directors of the Bankers Fire Insurance Company, and as a past President of the Southern Fidelity Mutual Insurance Co.

In 1925, Scarborough established the Scarborough Nursery Home to provide a place of health care and training for countless children whose parents had to work and often leave their children to care for themselves. Today, the Scarborough Nursery School still exists, and is listed as one of the community service agencies of The Durham United Fund. During its early years, Scarborough continued to support the school financially and in whatever way was required to maintain its existence, and later donated property to the Scarborough Nursery School Foundation from which the school could receive some income.

During its forty-seven years of existence, the school has cared for an estimated 5,000 children, releasing approximately 3,500 or more mothers for work. In addition to his presidency of Scarborough and Hargett Funeral Home, Trustee of The Daisy E. Scarborough Foundation, and Director of Scarborough Nursery School Board, Mr. Scarborough was a long-term member of St. Joseph's A.M.E. Church, and served as a member of the St. Joseph's Steward and Trustee Boards for more than 50 years. In addition to his early business venture, the affable Mr. Scarborough was also founder and advisor of the Funeral Directors and Morticians Association of North Carolina, Inc., was one of the organizers of the One O'clock Luncheon Club, and a charter member of Doric Lodge No. 28 of the Free and Accepted Masons.

student support services at the university. During the press conference which was held in the Student Union Ball Room on Shaw's campus, Dr. Hargraves told the standing room crowd of mostly students that the university had reduced its support services (staff members) from 112 to 88 effective Tuesday.

The four new top administrators are Professor Kenneth Bazzell, Dean of the School of Urban Sciences; Professor Horace Caple, Dean of the School of Arts and Science; Thomas Sims, Vice President-Control; Lawrence Allen, Vice President of Services.

The third phase of a three-point program outlined by Hargraves to reorganize the inter-collegiate operations for effective and efficient delivery will be announced within the next two or three weeks. Dr. Hargraves told a CAROLINIAN reporter Wednesday afternoon that a reorganization among the faculty members will be announced very soon.

"We can't rush through this phase of the program because we want to maintain the best faculty possible. We will have an official announcement concerning our faculty within the next two or three weeks," Hargraves stated Wednesday afternoon. In making the announcement about the changes at Shaw, Hargraves reported, "You should see a change in the production here at Shaw by the first of March. We made these changes for a more effective and efficient program for the students at Shaw."

Bazzell, 41, is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, B. S. degree; California State in Los Angeles, M. A. degree, and doctoral candidate at Duke University. Caple, 40, is a graduate of Hampton Institute, B. S. degree and a candidate for the M. A. degree, University of North Carolina. Simms comes from the position of Financial Officer of DGA International, Incorporated, an international consulting firm specializing in transferring European technology to the United States in the field of transportation, aerospace and construction. He is a graduate of Merritt College, Oakland, California, A. A. degree; John Hopkins University, B. S. degree, and American Institute of Banking.

Allen, 34, a graduate of Shaw University, A. B. degree, started at Shaw as a clerk, moved to the position of bookkeeper and later was promoted to the position of Director of Financial Aid. These appointments signify the completion of the first of three phases designed to reorganize the internal operations for effective and efficient delivery. Dr. Hargraves further announced the appointment of six young men from within as new Directors: Claude West, 25, Director of Recruiting, Admissions and Financial Aid; Mack Sowell, 27, Director of Student Life; Edward Silvey, 33, Director of National Development; William Love, 26, Director of Data Processing; William Jones, 24, Director of University and State Development; and William Link, 31, Director of Special Funds and Systems. In addition to these young men, Dr. Hargraves appointed a young woman, Mrs. Mable Wright, as Director of Student Records. The appointments of these Directors signifies the completion of the second of three phases.

President Nixon was a surprise guest at a testimonial dinner, honoring his black assistant and a benefit effort to aid in combating Sickle Cell Anemia, by giving the net proceeds from a dinner price tag of $17.50 per plate, to the Howard University Project, Social Service Administration Foster Children. The affair presided over by Sammy Davis, Jr. and Willie C. Mason, drew persons from the White House to the court house. Many notables from government, business, the civic community to the police department of High Point, N. C., his native city, and from whence he rose to national prominence. The most impressive part of the dinner was the fact that his wife, his mother, his grandmother and his aunt, along with his uncle, the Rev. Arthur Marshall, were in attendance and were able to share in the recognition. Brown had the following to say about his achievements: "There are few subjects which have engaged my concern, time

President Eisenhower in his second bid for the Presidency. She has served as a U. S. delegate to the United Nations and has been quite a campaigner, on the national level, for the Republican Party. It is the belief of the Black Republican Caucus that Dr. Edmonds would give the state the kind of stature it has not had in the U. S. Senate for a long time. Her knowledge of both domestic and foreign affairs would enable her to properly serve the state.

Black colleges have always had an open door policy to people of all races. The fact that these colleges no longer exist within a pattern of segregation is the best reason for the protection of their existence. The new competitive role of black schools allows them to lay to rest the old crippling belief that there are some things a black man cannot do or do. We all know, when anyone implies that there is some position a black can't have - despite his qualifications - be it the Vice Presidency of the United States or whatever - he is slamming the door in the face of every minority and unprivileged young man or woman in your schools... and all others in our land. We don't need this kind of advice from anyone and we are not going to take it.

This administration intends to open wide any closed doors of opportunity; and we will do it with or without the help of the prophets of doom, defeatism, negativism and hopelessness. It will be done with action and concrete results, not rhetoric. Another example of the administration's commitment - Take a look at the Department of Transportation's new effort to support programs at Black Colleges in urban mass transportation. Note the President's personal promise last year to provide emergency funds for students in Black medical schools. No rhetoric - 352 students benefited.

The new, more secure, trust of the black colleges makes them more than ever the incubator of black talent. The new black colleges can now seek and expect the kind of support that will allow its students to know no limit to their ambition. Dr. Edmonds was approached as she left Durham for an imposing speaking engagement that took her to Philadelphia and Lynchburg, Va. She asked that she be given some time to make a decision.

gia, for striking bakery workers. The projects in Birmingham and Savannah are part of SCLC's full-time program of organizing the working poor, directed by Carl E. Farris, National Labor Coordinator. At the meeting in Metropolitan A.M.E. Zion Church in Birmingham, Abernathy urged workers to continue signing union cards and to organize a union of their choice. More than a thousand employees at the University of Alabama Hospital and eight other hospitals here have already signed the cards. Dr. Abernathy vigorously defended the right of all workers to organize unions and bargain collectively for decent jobs and working conditions, and he urged black and white workers to remain united in the Birmingham effort. He also emphasized that SCLC cannot be a union, but that the organization will fully support a union chosen by the workers themselves.

The SCLC president noted that Alabama Governor George C. Wallace "likes to give the impression that he is for 'the little people.'" I would like to ask the Governor," Dr. Abernathy said, "which rung of the economic ladder does he think the state hospital workers are on when some of them have worked for 15 years and still make less than $100 a week -- while Mr. Wallace remains Governor of a state with a law that says such a worker cannot belong to a union. If he is for 'the little people' economically speaking, let the Governor explain how he feels about 'the little people's' right to organize a union, especially the employees of the state of Alabama." The hospital workers organizing project began more than seven months ago.
