(Continued from P. 1) state. All officers must have attained the age of 18. The presiding officer shall be known as the chairman and must have shown innate ability to be an administrator and exhibited a fair knowledge of parliamentary procedure. The chairman shall preside over the deliberations of the organization and should rule without fear or favor. During the interim, between meetings and the action of the executive committee, the chairman shall represent the organization in all matters, where Republican policies are being handled, or discussed. The chairman shall be elected for two years and shall hold office until a successor has been elected and installed. However, should it become apparent that the chairman is not working in the best interest of all concerned, the executive committee may declare the office vacant and appoint a chairman to serve until such time as the body might meet, in a call or regular session.

There shall be a vice-chairman who shall preside in the absence of the chairman, and shall perform the duties of the chairman. There shall be a recording secretary who shall keep a true and just record of all the deliberations of both the organization and the executive committee.

An assistant recording secretary shall be elected and shall serve in the absence of the recording secretary. It is devolved upon the recording secretary, when it is impossible to attend a meeting of either the body or the executive committee, that the assistant recording secretary be given minutes and correspondence of actions, taken in the previous meeting, or received during the interim, before the one the recording secretary cannot attend.

There shall be a treasurer, elected by the body. It shall be the duty of the treasurer to receive and record all monies paid to the organization, for any and all purposes. The treasurer shall give to payor or payers, an official receipt for same. It shall also be the duty of the treasurer to give to the recording secretary a true and just record of all monies received and disbursed.

The books of the treasurer shall be available to the executive committee and/or the body at any and all times, when requested. However, due and timely notice shall be given the treasurer as to time and place of intended inspection of books. All monies shall be deposited in a reputable depository. All expenditures shall only be made on an order, drawn by the secretary and signed by the chairman.

There shall be an executive committee, composed of the duly elected officers and one member of each county, wherever possible. The county chairman shall name the county members.

PROCEDURE: All meetings shall be convened in accordance with Robert's Rule of Order. The chairman shall name a parliamentarian.

He added that there would be an accompanying statement from the coalition "not on policy but to give a sense of direction we feel should be followed in these times." Martin also said that the coalition would urge membership to "convey the importance of their programs" to their constituents by "spelling out the drastic consequences" of a housing moratorium.

SICKLE CELL

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) chance that the child will have the anemia. But why is the disease almost exclusively a black man's burden? Although no one knows for sure, one theory is that the sickle cell has a protective value in the great malaria belts of the world - home of so many of the world's black men and women.

"It is significant," says the Digest, "that not only blacks but some whites through the Middle East and the Mediterranean, countries have the disease." Equally significant, perhaps, is the fact that sickle cell anemia is relatively rare among the blacks of South Africa, where little malaria is evident.

Despite its lethal toll, sickle cell anemia has been one of the nation's most neglected health problems - mainly, says the Digest, because it is a black man's disease. But after years of foot-dragging, Congress finally passed last May a measure authorizing up to $115 million for a three-year research program into sickle cell anemia.

While there is no known cure for the disease, it is hoped that a massive research program may aid in identifying sickle cell carriers, and provide genetic counseling to help bring the disease under control.

COUNCILMAN

(Continued from P. 1) radical council members elected in April, 1971. The strength of the radical vote in the Nov. 7 general election caused the group to back off on challenging black Councilman Ira Simmons and white Councilwoman Ilona Hancock, however.

Within the Berkeley radical coalition, divisions have been growing including rifts along racial lines. Councilmen Bailey and Simmons were excluded from a recent meeting of the committee organizing a coalition of radicals to run for the four seats on the nine-member city council up this year. They were excluded on grounds that they were unwilling to work with women's groups and white leftists.

Later, the organizing committee voted to open its sessions to everyone, but there is a strong possibility that Bailey and Simmons will not support the radical coalition in the upcoming elections.

Both men have been the target of criticism from other elements in the black community which comprises about 25 percent of Berkeley's population.

The Berkeley Black Caucus, which formally backed the two radicals in 1971, has criticized the councilmen for their reluctance to work with non-black groups. Similar complaints have come from Congressman Ronald Dellums (D-Calif.) and the Black Panther Party.

JUDGE FREES

(Continued from P. 1) andria and William M. Kunstler of New York had sought a motion after the Supreme Court had declined to hear Wansley's appeal following his second trial in Lynchburg in 1967 when he was sentenced to life.

In overturning the conviction, Judge Merhige granted a federal writ of habeas corpus, a motion to free a prisoner who is wrongly held on the grounds that the defendant could not have had a fair and impartial trial as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution because of "shockingly" prejudiced and "highly inflammatory" news and editorial stories by the two daily newspapers in Lynchburg, The News and The Daily Advance.

In the 27-page opinion, Judge Merhige also supported the defendant's claim that he had been illegally indicted by a grand jury that "was the product of racial discrimination" and that he had been "unfairly" denied the protection of the courts.

(Continued from P. 1) caliber pistol. Hunter and Wilson were in a car with another man when the shooting occurred, police said.

Investigation in the motive in the case and other events is continuing. Durham County police officials are "mum" on any details concerning the fatal death, although newsman have persistently tried to gather the needed information regarding the death.

SOUTHERN U.

(Continued from P. 1) barred from the campus, charged that the university's estimate was faulty, stating that less than 50 percent of the students had returned.

Southern's 2,700 student branch in New Orleans appears calm now after a two-month-long boycott was lifted following negotiations between the administration and students.

Meanwhile, a biracial committee headed by State Attorney General William Guste continued its closed-door hearings to prepare a final report on the student slayings. In a preliminary report presented last month, the commission concluded that the two students were killed by buckshot pellets fired from a shotgun in the area where the sheriff's deputies were deployed.

The commission, which resumes next Tuesday, is expected to make suggestions on the future conduct of police in similar situations. The Parish (county) grand jury has already received information and evidence gathered during the commission's deliberations and will consider the possibility of further investigation. In addition, the New East

Baton Rouge Parish District Attorney, Ossie B. Brown, has said he will also conduct an investigation of the incident.

DEMOINCEFO

At a press conference last week, Kawaida representative read a statement by Baraka accusing the white radicals of "attempting to get back into the newspaper via the usual route" of exploiting black issues.

"They are attempting to use Kawaida as a new vehicle with which to thumb their noses at a society at which they are momentarily peeved, but which they stand a good chance to inherit," said Baraka.

A spokesman for SDS said the organization became interested in the project because "many white people throughout the country are being organized by white officials, such as Assemblyman (Anthony) Imperiale, to stop the construction of housing for blacks and Spanish-speaking persons."

Imperiale, an independent county assemblyman, said he had asked his followers to refrain from picketing while the other white groups were present in order to avoid confrontation.

The Kawaida spokesman charged that SDS and Imperiale were both guilty of racism in interfering in the lives and self-determination of black people. "If SDS were doing the work it needs to be doing, that is educating and liberalizing the white community instead of taking irresponsible trips as unwanted missionaries-to-the-colored, there would be fewer Kawaida Tower-type confrontations and more genuine harmony between true progressives from whatever race," chided Baraka.

On the related issue of the city council's refusal to ratify Edward L. Kerr, Mayor Kenneth Gibson's choice for Newark police director, a Kawaida spokesman said: "That doesn't even bother us, because as far as we're concerned he's black, qualified and committed, so he's black folks police director. Now let them deal with that."

Kerr, a 48-year-old police lieutenant, was named by Gibson to replace white police director John L. Redden who resigned in frustration and anger over his dissatisfaction at the city administration's handling of the racial controversy. He is presently serving a 90-day appointment to the post. It is expected to be renewed, however, when it expires in April.

SOUND ADVICE

Industrial Hearing Safety: It is estimated that as high as fifty percent of this nation's industrial workers may be exposed to potentially hazardous on-the-job noise levels. Overcoming this problem will require the efforts being made by enlightened managements, the federal government and the cooperation of industrial workers. This is the warning of the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation, Sponsored by Chicago-based Beltone Electronics Corporation, world leader in hearing aids and electronic hearing test instruments, the crusade is designed to encourage meaningful hearing conservation programs and the control of noise pollution.

To meet the problem of on-the-job noise, the federal government developed noise exposure limits under the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act, and more recently under the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which gives the Secretary of Labor wide authority to establish safety and health standards including hearing conservation guidelines.

Provisions of these acts specify that when job requirements make it impractical to keep sound levels within safe limits, employees must be provided with protective ear devices. However, providing workers with such devices is of no value unless they are used when needed.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR WARREN BOATWRIGHT: A FRIEND IN GOD'S MOST PRECIOUS GIFT TO MAN. Boatwright was a friend to all. He loved everybody.

A simple but impressive 30-minute Memorial Service was held for Warren Boatwright on Saturday, December 30, at 3 p.m. at the Oberlin Baptist Church with the Rev. Mr. Joseph P. Campese officiating, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Leonard Farrar. Mrs. Lucille G. Campbell was the organist. The order of service was as follows: After the prayer and presentation of beautiful music was rendered by a combined choir of Oberlin Methodist and Oberlin Baptist Churches, Scripture as read by the Rev. Mr. Farrar. A fervent prayer was offered by Mr. William Freebles, who was president of the Fab Smith Bible Class. Stanley Bachelle sang a solo - "Precious Lord." The eulogy was offered by the Rev. Dennis Warren Boatwright was described as a man who was very friendly and loved by all. He knew death was near but did not want his friends and relatives to know. He never let anybody worry. He hated to see people grieved. He did not care to be a burden to his family and friends. Comfort was taken in the words of the text: "There is a sleep between me and death." Boatwright loved people and he was particularly good to his friends. His funeral services were at Carolina Biblical Center.

POET'S CORNER

EDITORS NOTE: The following poem was written for and dedicated to the Rev. Mrs. Cecelia Hayes, pastor of the Mount Olive Holy Church. A CHILD OF GOD. When you see her you know: That glow on her face, Tells you so

She has a loving smile and. A hearty Amen. A stomp and a shout and Amen again.

Deep in her heart. She really tries. To be not dismayed whatever, Be tides.

She's a child of God. So loving and true. She's forever thinking of me and you.

She's a child of God. Just watch her you'll see. When it comes to praises, She's really set free.

Not only a learner. But a doer as well. She never fails. Of God's goodness to tell.

Warning us to get ready for That final day. May the Lord ever bless. Our Rev. Sister Hayes: May He continue to walk. Beside her the rest of her days: May she ever keep. Those shouts and joy and Those hearty Amens. May He ever continue to Use her again and again.

Dedicated to Rev. Sis. Hayes By Mrs. Pattie Morgan, Raleigh

The Two Faces Of B. Waldron

Betty Waldron has added a new dimension to her career with her screen debut as "Ivrelle" opposite Bernie Casey in MGM's "The Hit Man." Miss Waldron's role as a fanciful madame, is an integral part of the mystery surrounding the death of Tyrone Tackett's "Bernie Casey" brother.

The action-packed drama traces the mafia organized disposal of Cornell Tackett, and his brother's subsequent track-down by the murderers. Ivrelle supplies the missing clue to the circumstances surrounding Cornell's demise.

Miss Waldron is not always so intricately involved in murder plots, however. Comedy is her usual forte and as a standup comedienne showcasing her act in Los Angeles, she was discovered by producer Breck Wall who signed her for a part in his successful comedy revue, "Bottoms Up," where she has been appearing for two years at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas.

With her role in "The Hit Man," Betty certainly confirms the belief that most comedians are also great actors. She is so convincing as the rather cynical prostitute.

CLUB NEWS

DUNBAR'S SOCIAL CLUB GIVES YULE CHEER BY W. A. "PETE" WILDER

The Dunbar Social Club observed its finest year ever during the year 1972.

The month of December was its finest month, with the election of officers for 1973. The Welfare Program reached a new high, with the cooperation of the local social services bureau furnishing a list of needy families.

Purchases were made from local merchants. Cottingham's manager, Hayes, saw to it that his store had a hand in the community, with a creditable amount of funds. Everybody was happy to have had a hand in the spreading of Christmas cheer.

that her career has taken a new turn toward motion pictures. She recently departed the "Bottoms Up" cast to pursue comedienne showcasing her act in Los Angeles, she was discovered by producer Breck Wall who signed her for a part in his successful comedy revue, "Bottoms Up," where she has been appearing for two years at the Flamingo Hotel in Las Vegas.

With her role in "The Hit Man," Betty certainly confirms the belief that most comedians are also great actors. She is so convincing as the rather cynical prostitute.

There comes a time when you have to take a chance, to decide on keeping the security of a steady show or trying my wings and fly in another direction. It's a great time for blacks in the motion picture industry, doors are opening that were closed to us before. I will always be a comedienne but now I'm ready to extend what ever talents I may have into other areas. I'm also taking singing and dancing lessons. The more I learn, the more I have to offer.

CARLA THOMAS LEADS NAM TRIP: Carla Thomas, Stax Records' First Lady of Soul, will lead an all-black, all star tour of the Far East and Vietnam, departing Los Angeles on Jan. 4. The tour, which will also play bases in Thailand, will continue through Jan. 24.

Appearing with Miss Thomas will be her brother, Marvella, who will lead the Sounds, a Los Angeles based soul-rock quintet with jazz brass overtones. Also featured on the show are The Sophisticates, a trio of nesses who record for Chess-Janus.

The 21-day tour is sponsored by the USO and Department of Defense.

Ignazio Porro invented in 1851 a prism combination which was to play an important part in the future development of binoculars. The prism combination made it possible to reduce the size of binoculars without sacrificing magnification, thus enabling powerful binoculars to be hand held.

Modern binocular technology have enlarged significantly on these developments. They have succeeded in making binoculars brighter and more powerful without adding size or weight.
