HEALTH & SCIENCE SHORTS

TRUTH IN SAYINGS
In Appalachian folklore, jeweled takes the itch out of poison ivy, poke berries help rheumatism, and mullein is good for colds.

There may be more truth in these sayings than is generally thought, says Dr. Galor B. Podor, Professor of Chemistry at West Virginia University, who plans to investigate Appalachian plants in an effort to produce medically active compounds.

EARLY TREATMENT OF HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE URGED
Hypertension is currently recognized as one of the most important risk factors in the occurrence of coronary heart disease.

At a Medical Horizons symposium for physicians on management of hypertension, there was general agreement that early treatment is important, and that the risk of stroke, coronary heart disease, and death increases when the condition is not controlled.

By reducing blood pressure, anti-hypertensive drugs prolong life and arrest vascular damage. The symposium was sponsored by The Milton S. Hershey Medical Center of the Pennsylvania State University and CIBA Pharmaceutical Company. The symposium's moderator, Irvine H. Page, M.D., urged further research on hypertension, the need for which, he said, was never greater.

CHOOSING OUR CHILDREN'S GENES
Genetic counseling is the "most significant resource" we now have for direct intervention in choosing our children's genes, says Harvey A. Bender, Ph.D., Professor of Biology, University of Notre Dame.

Counseling may be divided into diagnostic, educative, and decision-making phases. The counselor assumes responsibility for diagnosis and education, actual choice is left to the individual.

There is a vital need for society to absorb counseling costs and to support basic research, if genetic problems are to be approached effectively, Dr. Bender emphasizes.

NAIL BITING MAY BE HEREDITARY
A genetic basis for nail biting in children was indicated by an investigation of the habit in twins. Of 338 pairs of twins (676 children) age 6 years and older studied, 203 children or 30.3 percent bit their nails. The habit was 1.5 times as common in girls as in boys. When a parent had been a nail-biter, the chances of a child being a nail-biter were about three times as great as when neither parent had bitten their nails.

THE HOME STREAM
Migratory fish such as salmon and trout have been successfully taught to home in on particular rivers and streams by imprinting them to synthetic odors, says Dale M. Madison of the University of Wisconsin Laboratory of Limnology.

"We know that the home stream odor is an important guide to fish heading back to their home streams to spawn," Madison says.

So it should be possible to raise fish in a hatchery, imprint them artificially to a chemical odor, release them, and then attract them back by adding the imprinting chemical to the water, he says, adding that the implications for fisheries management are great.

DENTISTS TEST A PATIENT'S SENSITIVITY
Dentists sometimes test a patient for "sensitivity" following completion of dental therapy with a jet stream of cold water or air. Should the patient visibly react, and some have been known to almost jump with pain, the dentist may suspect dental hypersensitivity.

According to an article in The New York Journal of Dentistry, unless the dentist is aware of the symptoms and reactions characteristic of hypersensitive teeth, the problem may go unrecognized or untreated.

More than three-quarters of the patients suffering from hypersensitive teeth included in the study described in the dental journal obtained relief "through normal care of their teeth at home" by substituting a specially formulated toothpaste for the one they had been using. The dentists identified the therapeutic dentifrice as Sensodyne.

The authors explain that tooth surface sensitivity is found especially in patients with receding gums, and that pain can be precipitated by acids, sugars, toothbrushing, toothpicks, and by too-vigorous use of dental floss. Hot and cold foods and beverages, cold air, or dental instruments may trigger pain. "Changes in atmospheric pressure such as is evidenced in flying can also cause sensitivity," they add.

Workshops Begin For Coaches
Men and women coaches of Raleigh City and Wake County Schools were told recently by school administrators that there is no better way to improve professionally as coaches than to become more qualified and competent in sports medicine.

This view was translated into action Wednesday when a series of five workshops on sports medicine began for coaches from both school systems.

The workshops which will include new trends, prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation of athletic injuries were cooperatively planned by the Raleigh and Wake County Schools. Al Proctor, Director of Sports Medicine for the State Department of Public Instruction, and several city and county physicians.

Already 70 men and women coaches from the two school systems have signed up for the course, according to Wat Holbyfield, Director of Health and Physical Education for the Raleigh Schools.

"The growing interest and demands of coaches and trainers to become more knowledgeable in the area of sports medicine precipitated the workshop," Holbyfield said. "We all see the need. After all, what is more important than the prevention, care and rehabilitation of injuries to our boys and girls?"

STEVE DENNIS TO MAKE TOUR
NEW YORK, N.Y. - Talented Steve Dennis, the purposeful Grambling College defensive back who concealed his All-American ability behind a guise of relaxed affability, has been invited by the Army to make a 10-day tour of Europe to visit U.S. servicemen.

Four different teams of two men each composed of musicians, distinguished speakers and members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes will go on walking tours through coffee houses, barracks, discussion centers, chapels and recreation centers in late winter and early spring as part of an aggressive Army program to improve equal opportunities and human relations, and combat drug and alcohol use.

Dennis is president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes at Grambling.

He performed with distinction in the classroom and on the football field, epitomizing the student-athlete by winning one of 33 coveted $1,000 postgraduate scholarships awarded by the NCAA.

Dennis has a cumulative average of 3.2 on a 4.0 scale. The 170-pound physical education major was named to the Associated Press, Universal Sports, Gridiron and Mutual Black Sports college-division All-American teams.

An outstanding prospect, Dennis was coached by Eddie Robinson, one of the nation's most successful mentors. Robinson has sent more players into the play-for-pay ranks than any other coach in the country.

Athletes making the tour will receive an honorarium of $500 each plus payment of travel, food and lodging expenses.

NFL Players Association president John Mackey, claiming that club owners have refused to discuss any vital issues, is warning of a players' strike in 1973. Of particular interest to the players are possible expansion into Canada, the commissioner form of governing the league and the Rozelle Rule, which allows Commissioner Pete Rozelle to determine compensation for a team which loses a player to another club when he plays out his option.
