AMERICAN ROCKY MOUNT - If you listened and watch on TV the very impressive All-American funeral rites conducted in Dee Cee for our last former U.S. President Lyndon Baines John-President Lyndon Baines John-son, you must have gotten a lump in your throat if not a tear in your eye as the beautiful, truthful, tributes were paid to the tall, sun-tanned and terrific Texan who used to great advantage his native homespun biloscobu during his vages at philosophy during his years at the helm (we do not mean Jesse) of our Nation. Being President at a major turning point in the history of this nation, LBJ faced problems much greater than which cattle to breed or sell on his vast Texas ranch. It was a crucial time when America was trying to extricate itself from the dua standard of racial inequality toward its blacks and browns. History has recorded that one of Mr Johnson's major acts of his waning administration was spearheading the enactment of the civil rights laws of the sixties, for which all minorities should be forever thankful. Lyndon Johnson stood, not only "tall in the saddle" as he only "tall in the saddle" as he rode his ranch, but when he (like Abe Lincoln) got in a (like Abe Lincoln) got in a position to do something great for the browns and blacks he saw mistreated when he first taught school in his Texas hill country he loved so well. May others get the impression he left

The equality of four blacks and four whites as his pall bearers, and masterful singing of two selections by Lynotine Price compensated for the lack of an integrated choir at National City Church. Two darkskinned women were ob-served near the family. We served near the family. We assume they were closely connected with Texas White House staff. Then, prominent in the congregation was NAACP's Clarence Mitchell, Jr., known as the "101st senator", who has watched over the actions of Congress and all Presidents for some 25 years. much to the some 25 years, much to the advantage of Negro civil rights. The above we saw on CBS-TV. ut it was Chet Huntley on NBC-TV who closed their presentation of the funeral with a story about someone telling to tell Mr. Johnson that cook whatever the concern was about, to remember that, after about, to remember that, after all, he was only a man like anyone else, or words to that effect. The cook, a loyal servant, promptly replied (Chet related) "but he does not know
