Bonham played tackle at NCCU but he will be shifted to a guard position in the pros because of his size. He domonstrated during the season that he has the speed needed to pull out of the line and lead end sweeps since N. C. Central ran many plays where the tackle would pull to lead sweeps.

Williams, who came to N.C. Central as a quarterback but was later converted to a tight end, has the physical makings to make it big in the pros. His blocking abilities plus his abity to catch the ball were the factors in getting him a try in the pla. Or pay league. Inmon, who proved during the season that his size would not be a drawback, is small in terms of prostandards for a running back but if determination has anything to do with it, Inmon will make somebody's team in the professional league. Rams Trip Shaw Bears By 85 To 77; Norfolk State Routs Falcons, 116-89

The two best teams in the CIAA, record-wise, came to Raleigh last Saturday night to do battle with the St. Augustine's Falcons and the Shaw University Bears at Broughton Gymnasium. By the time the final whistle sounded ending the last Capital City Doubleheader, the two visiting teams had come away with very important CIAA visitories.

Winston-Salem State, the leader of the Southern Division in the CIAA, had to pull out all stops before defeating the hard luck Shaw Bears, 85-77 in the first game of the twinbill. Norfolk State had an easier time in the nightcap as the Spartans, the leaders of the Northern Division, walked away with a 116-89 victory over the Falcons of St. Augustine's.

At this point, Coach Harvey Heartley called a time out and after the one minute break, St. Augustine's was able to at least find the scoring range. The Falcons made a game out of the contest after the cold draught but by this time, the contest was out of reach. The visitors from Norfolk who are the defending Northern Division and CIAA Tournament champions, led

AREA GRIDDERS TO GET A CHANCE IN PRO RANKS

The professional drafts last week may have surprised some people in this area but George Quiett, retiring coach at North Carolina Central, by no way was surprised.

Quiett had been saying all season long that he thought he had as many as five senior players who would be drafted by the pros this season. And when the drafts were concluded late last Wednesday night, the former St. Augustine's coach was proved a prophet.

Professional scouts thought enough of Jason Caldwell, Jefferson Immon, Mahlon Williams. Bracey Bonham and Jeff Horsley to choose them from the sixth through the 15 rounds.

Caldwell had the ratings of all the professional teams to be a player with a can't miss label. One player scout for personnel told this bureau that Caldwell had some many natural talents that it would be hard for the teams to overlook him in the drafts. By natural talents we mean such things as speed, ability to catch the ball in a crowd and good hands. In other words fundamentals which can't be learning he had been nicked in the 6th round by the Los FAYETTEVILLE - Miss L. J. Taylor, Director of the Fayette-ville State University Girl's Baskethall squad, recently announced that the schedule has been revised. The team is presently undefeated with a 6-0 record. The revised schedule is as follows: Feb. 8 Bennett College of Greensboro at home; Feb. 16 St. Augustine's of Raleigh at home; and March 2 and 3 the tournament at Raleigh.

All home games are played at can't be taught.

After learning he had been picked in the 6th round by the Los Angeles Rams, Caldwell, a native of Winston-Salem, said he thought he would have been picked earlier.

One of the big surprises was Horsley. Then too, we must look at one of his natural abilities and that is speed. Horsley is a member of Dr. Leroy Walker's sprint relay teams at NCCU and he definitely has speed. He has sure speed but rather or not he can adjust his natural speed to fit the speed needed for football remains to be seen. Lilly Gym. Fayetteville State University beginning at 7:30

After the 56-6 setback to Grambling in the first annual Pelican Bowl, many thought North Carolina Central had been overrated. But sitting in the press box for that game that day were some 29 professional scouts. When the game was over some of those 29 men stated that when the professional drafts came up, NCCU might have the best laugh after all. Sure enough, they were right.

GREEN TO GET HIS CHANCE.

Closer to home. Van Green. star cornerback for the Shaw Bears, was picked up by the Cleveland Browns as a defensive back. Despite the fact Shaw experienced a losing season last fall, the proscouts took their turns in getting a good look at Green. When the proscouts were seen coming into Chavis Park with their scouting books, it was no question who they were coming to see. Van Green. One of the big factors going for Green was the fact he loved contact. "He will come up and get right into the middle of the action," one player personnel scout told this bureau. In addition to his ability to hit, Green will have to learn to defend against the pass if he is going to play cornerback in the pros. But with time and teaching, we believe he can learn all the techniques to make him a candidate for this position with the Cleveland Browns.

William Wideman of A&T was selected in the 10th round by the New York Giants. Wideman was the sparkplug for the Aggies' defensive unit from his detensive tackle or end position.

Wideman would like to make it big in the pro ranks as did another former A&T star. Elvin Bethea of the Houston Oilers.

RANDOM COMMENTS

CORRECTION: In this bureau last week we said the last time Hampton made the CIAA was in 1937. We beg your pardon. The last time the Pirates went to the CIAA dribble derby was in 1967 when they played A&T in the first round. This game will be remembered by many as the slow down game. In that game, the score at halftime was 4-3 in 1avor of A&T. The Pirates tried a slow down game and stayed within striking distance of the Aggies. Pete Williams remembers the game quite well because he was one of the officials in the game. This had to be the easiest game in his entire officialting career because it did not involve a lot of running and shooting.
