Defendants' Rights Upheld

Action Of Agency Is

Condemned

NEW YORK, N.Y. - Vernon E. Jordan, Jr., executive director of the National Urban League, last weekend, sent a scathing protest to the federal Office of Economic Opportunity condemning that agency's consideration of a $3 million program to propagandize self-help programs.

The agency move was revealed in a Washington Post story that said consideration was being given to a grant to the U.S. Jaycees "to disseminate success stories of self-help groups at the poverty level."

Jordan acted because OEO has cut funds and phased out direct aid to community action groups. He termed the propaganda project "indefensible at a time when scarce resources should be applied directly to aiding community programs now starved for funds." An OEO action that provides funds for an organization of businessmen to provide information about self-help programs while cutting off funds from hundreds of local self-help efforts is, he said, "adding insult to injuries already inflicted on poor people."

The text of Mr. Jordan's wire to Howard Phillips, acting director of OEO follows:

"Strongly protest consideration of three million dollar OEO grant to Jaycees to propagandize self-help projects. In light of massive social service cuts and abandonment of constructive OEO community projects such as a project would amount to adding insult to injuries already inflicted on poor

Young, Three Whites In Fight-He's In Hospital

BY STAFF WRITER

Peter Anthony Young, 33, of Wake Forest, was almost stabbed to death here Sunday morning as he and three white inmates at Central Prison engaged in an affray. It was not made known whether the stabbings had racial overtones.

Officials at Central say they are still trying to determine what happened to trigger the fracas. Young suffered multiple stab wounds, while the other three received only minor injuries. Young was stabbed in the chest, abdomen and on both arms.

The three others were Harvey Lee Murchison, 39, Springfield, Mass.; Michael Green, 30, Charlotte; and Joe L. Cobb, 28, of Blacksburg, S.C. Deputy Warden Nathan Rice said the fight started about 8:30 a.m. as these four men were in

WILLIAMS FACES EXTRADITION - Detroit, Mich. - Robert F. Williams, a black revolutionary of the early 1960s, who spent eight years in exile in Cuba and China, faced extradition to North Carolina June 19 on a 12-year-old kidnaping charge. Williams, 50, fled the United States after being charged, along with four others, in the kidnaping of a white couple during racial disturbances in Monroe, N.C., July 27, 1961. (UPI)

Broadens Rights Of Defendants

WASHINGTON - In recent decisions, the Supreme Court had appeared to be wavering from upholding the rights of criminal suspects, however last week it changed direction in midstream and broadened the rights of defendants in two major areas.

In a pair of unanimous rulings, the high court gave defendants more opportunity to present an alibi at their trial and rejected a partial measure for remedying the denial of a speedy trial to defendants.

In the first decision, the justices struck down an Oregon law which required a person planning to offer an alibi to notify the prosecutor at least five days in advance of the start of the trial.

The prosecutor in the case of Ronald Dale Wardius, who had been charged with selling narcotics, had invoked the law because he had not received the required five days' notice. Consequently, Wardius was prevented from presenting an alibi and bringing in a second witness to corroborate his story.

Oregon courts upheld the

Appreciation Money Is Won By Lady Here

Mrs. Myrtle Harris of 859 Hadley Road broke the long winless drought of The CAROLINIAN's new Appreciation Money Feature last week by being a winner in the weekly feature of this newspaper. For two straight weeks no winners claimed their $10 prizes.

Her name appeared in the New Bern Avenue Exxon advertisement on page 12 of The CAROLINIAN last week. New Bern Avenue Exxon, located at 1200 New Bern Avenue, is managed by "Chuck" Hunter. The motto of New Bern Avenue Exxon is "Service Is Our Business."

FBI Enters Probing Of NJ Slaying

CHERRY HILL, N.J. - Federal investigators have joined the probe of the murder last week of Major B. Coxson, the flashy black entrepreneur, ex-convict, and unsuccessful Camden mayoral candidate, who was found shot to death gangland-style in his rented $200,000 mansion here. (See last rites on page 8).

The U.S. Attorney for Pennsylvania, Robert E. Curran, said the Federal Government was "very interested" in the murder because Coxson, who had appeared before a federal grand jury in Philadelphia, had been "inches away from indictment for obstruction of justice and conspiracy" at the time of his death.

Curran would not elaborate on the nature of the charges. However, there were wide

ANGELA SPARKS WILMINGTON RALLY - Wilmington - Angela Davis along with Ben Chavis are shown after the rally in support of Chavis who went on trial Monday on charges of being an accessory after the fact of murder. With Chavis and Miss Davis is Chavis's daughter, Michell. After the rally, law enforcement personnel were on alert because of opposing demonstrations. Miss Davis spoke here Sunday to a capacity audience. (UPI)

Four Black Congressmen Join Faint 'Impeach Nixon' Chorus

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Four members of the Congressional Black Caucus advocated an inquiry into President Nixon's conduct in office with an eye towards possible impeachment on the House floor last week.

Only 35 Representatives were present as Reps. Ronald Dellums (D-Cal.), Charles Rangel (D-N.Y.), Parren J. Mitchell (D-Md.) and Yvonne Brathwaite Burke (D-Cal.), along with other liberal Democrats, urged the House to live up to its Constitutional responsibilities as the only body empowered to bring impeachment charges.

While not directly calling for a resolution of impeachment, their speeches reflected concern over not only the Watergate scandal, but other Presidential actions.

Rep. Burke, in response to the belief that a House inquiry would be a reshuffle of the current Senate Watergate hearings, asserted that only the House could Constitutionally consider impeachment.

She added, "Moreover, there are many other areas of inquiry concerning possible impeachable offenses which the Senate committee or the Cox investigation has no jurisdiction to probe."

The California Democrat cited the continued bombing of Cambodia, impoundment of appropriated funds and abuse of the executive privilege doctrine as possible offenses.

However, the main focus was

CRIME BEAT
From Raleigh's Official Police Files

'FINGERS' BOYFRIEND - Mrs. Irene Willingham Holden, 39, 700 Coleman Street, told Officer B. B. Baucom at 2:02 a.m. Sunday, that she became involved in an argument with her boyfriend on Fountain Drive in Southgate Apartments. She also stated that when they got back to her house on Cumberland, he beat her and struck her with a pistol, then threatened to shoot her. Investigative notes revealed that the alleged boyfriend is a Thomas Adcock, 35, 910 E. Edenton Street. The cop also reported that he will be driving a white 1965 Ford station wagon. Mrs. Holden, who showed no visible signs of injuries, was advised to sign an assault on a female warrant against the man.
